Yuki, Korea, near Siberian Frontier, Aug. 9.—Soviet heavy artillery pounded the whole 4-mile Japanese front today.

This correspondent watched the bombardment—most intensive since the current border trouble started July 11—from a ringside seat. It was warfare in dead earnest.

It seemed impossible that men could remain alive under such shelling. Six-inch projectiles came over at the rate of at least six a minute.

Reds Build New Defenses.

Today's cannonade removed all doubt in the minds of observers as to the accuracy of Soviet artillery. Invariably one or two sighting shots were followed by a series of direct hits which were continued until the shelling had shifted to another point.

The Japanese said the Russians were constructing new defenses. A war office spokesman in Tokyo said the development indicated extension of the front. The war office said Russia was concentrating cavalry, artillery and tanks on the southwest shore of Possiet Bay, several miles east of the disputed border zone.

Construction of new Soviet defenses on Possiet Bay was regarded as of particular importance. The bay forms a submarine base guarding approaches to the Soviet naval base at Vladivostok, 75 miles to the northeast.

Village Set Afire.

Marshal Vassily Bluecher, Soviet commander in chief in the Far East, was reported to have arrived at Novokievsk, some 20 miles northeast of Changkufeng, to take command of his forces.

The army announced extension of the fighting to Sulliufen, 6 miles north of Shachofeng in the Changkufeng area. Two Soviet battalions were said to have attacked there.

At the foot of Changkufeng hill a village blazed fiercely. Hundreds of shells had scored direct hits. On the Korean side of the Tumen River only one spot was the target of Soviet guns in the afternoon bombardment, a hill which was struck by probably 30 big shells.

Both Soviet and Japanese machine-gun and rifle fire was heard

Double-parked trucks leave but little street . . .

By Howard F. Wentworth.

During the past year—from July 1, 1937—a total of 17 Washingtonians have been killed by trucks. Seven were children.

Recognizing the splendid and effective safety programs of larger trucking concerns and fleet operators, The Washington Post and Junior Board of Commerce have joined to enlist support of the light delivery class in current efforts to safeguard District streets.

Independent truck owners—in fact, every type of trucking company or delivery service not now organized for safety—are urged to join this move and pledge themselves to promote safe driving among their employes.

The Junior Board of Commerce has agreed to throw open facilities of its Accident Prevention Institute and provide free demonstrations and talks by nationally recognized traffic authorities.

The Post, in a manner to be announced later, will reward individual drivers and concerns showing the best safety record over a period of years.

The clean record of major truck fleets in Washington is evidence of what can be done by organizing for safety. Truck drivers as a group are among the city's safest. Many large concerns—the Potomac Electric Power Co., Capital Transit Co., numerous bakeries and others—conduct definite safety programs and warn their drivers against recklessness and lawlessness.

In some cases, fleet employes are penalized by suspension or even

President Sets Out on Tour in 2 Foes' States

By the Associated Press.

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 9.—President Roosevelt returned to the United States on the cruiser Houston today—full of conversation about his fishing trip but not talkative about politics.

He left here at 9:10 p. m. for Warm Springs, Ga., after inspecting the air station, Fort Barranons and Corry Field.

The Chief Executive, who left San Diego in mid-July on a search for fighting fish of both oceans, told reporters about the various species of marine animals which were collected on the trip by Dr. Waldo Schmidt, a scientist who accompanied him.

Asked for comment on renomination of Senator Barkley in Kentucky, the President said it was just about what he had expected.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had been working on two speeches he will deliver at Athens and Barnesville, Ga., Thursday.

He said he did not know whether the talks would be political, because they were in the rough draft stage and he would have to go over them again. The Chief Executive laughed when a reporter asked whether the talks would be

Court Defers Earle Inquiry Indefinitely

Ruling on Jury Trial Must Wait Return of Jurists From Vacations.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 9.—The highest court in Pennsylvania abruptly postponed today—possibly for the summer—rival investigations by the Legislature and a grand jury into campaign charges against Gov. George H. Earle and 13 Democratic associates.

Chief Justice John W. Kephart, of the Supreme Court, ordered Judge Paul N. Schaeffer to show why the Dauphin County grand jury's inquiry, scheduled to start Thursday, should not be suspended.

The stay was asked by a special investigating committee set up by the Legislature to take over the court investigation. It will be in force until the constitutionality of new laws is determined by all the Supreme Court justices now on vacation.

Judge Schaeffer, assigned by the high court to handle the case, ruled invalid the new laws designed to shift the investigation from the grand jury to the Democratic-controlled Legislature. The judge called them an "invasion of judicial power." Appeal was taken by the House committee and Attorney General Guy K. Bard.

Kephart's ruling did not apply specifically to the General Assembly's investigation. However, Chairman Herbert B. Cohen ob-

Farley Warns Party to Place Public Good Ahead of Spoils

By the United Press.

Additional hitherto untold secrets and strategems which attended President Roosevelt's first nomination and election and subsequent difficulties with subordinates and job-seekers were revealed last night by National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley in the second of a series of articles in the American Magazine.

In unusually frank language the Postmaster General speaks his mind about the President's so-called brain trust, his Cabinet, the spoils system and inter-party fights and jealousies, but at no point does he give the slightest credence to recurring reports that he and Mr. Roosevelt have come to a parting of the ways. Instead he glorifies the Chief Executive in circumstances which, when they occurred, caused the Administration considerable embarrassment.

He defends the much-maligned spoils system, life-blood of politics, as a necessary requisite of sound government, but says that "when political organizations begin to think about jobs and nothing else, when they forget that public business should come first, they have commenced their own death chant." A lust for jobs on the part of short-sighted leaders, he added, "has broken up more political organizations, both Republican and Democratic, than any other single cause. "Patronage—and patronage alone—is not the only thing that keeps

Prankster Throws Rock, Fractures Skull of Child, 8

William Bolding Field, 8, of Knoxville, Tenn., visiting here with his parents, was injured seriously yesterday when struck on the head by a rock thrown by an older boy.

Police flashed a lookout for the assailant, described as 16, 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 120 pounds.

William, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Peckingpaugh, of Knoxville, was playing with his brother, Samuel, 10, at the foot of an embankment near the park at Belmont road and Waterside drive northwest. Samuel told police an older boy threw a stone at them from the top of the hill and ran.

Knocked unconscious, William was taken to Garfield Hospital by a passing motorist who was stopped by Samuel. Doctors said William suffered a fractured skull.

Ga. Awaiting Roosevelt in Tense Mood

State Wonders if Camp Will Get Blessing of President.

Speech Tomorrow May Add Spirit to 3-Way Senate Contest.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, Ga., Aug. 9.—Georgia voters are tense tonight—wondering whether President Roosevelt will "go the distance" for handsome, prematurely-gray Lawrence B. Camp, who has undertaken to remove Walter F. George from the United States Senate.

The President speaks at Barnesville Thursday, here in the State that he calls his "other home." There is little doubt that it will be a political speech, intended to rally the South to his support, either by an appeal for his objectives and philosophy or, more directly, for election of a Senator who will go along with hm in his program.

Urbane, poised Senator George, opponent of much of the New Deal, is in the lead in the Senate race now, it would appear, ahead of Camp, Federal district attorney for north Georgia, and former Gov. Eugene Talmadge, the red-gallused magician of the stump.

But President Roosevelt is "strong medicine" in Georgia, more so than in any other State visited on this junket.

To New Dealers a high brand of anathema is the thought of either another six years with Senator George or of an initial six years with red-necked, howling Gene Talmadge, one of the bitterest anti-Roosevelt bush-beaters in the Nation. The palace politicians are praying for the President to "go all the way" for Camp. But the purgeless purge tour illustrated brilliantly the President's caution about betting on horses with short noses, and so there are fingers crossed in every county seat in Georgia tonight, and only time and Barnesville can tell.

Even Gov. Ed Rivers, who is distinctly ahead in his campaign for re-election, has adopted a "hands-off-the-Senate-race" attitude. Begged by all sides for an indorsement, he has remained vigilantly aloof.

Senator George is not very popular with the rank-and-file. He awes them—the dignity of his bearing, his judicial gravity and bass voice, his well-tailored clothes. A farmer related a little anecdote which illuminates the Senator's attitude:

Danish Separation Granted Barbara; Count Guides Son

Copenhagen, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—The Danish ministry of justice announced tonight that it has granted a legal separation to Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow and the former Barbara Hutton, on the basis of an agreement signed by them in London.

Under the separation agreement, the count waived all claims to any part of her $40,000,000 fortune but obtained control over the future of their 2-year-old son, Lance.

Without the agreement the count, under Danish law, might claim one-half of the countess' estate. Under Danish procedure, a period of legal separation usually ranging from one to two years, must precede any formal action for divorce.

Train Slides Past 2 Stations, Stops; Motorman Dead

New York, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—The Long Island Railroad's No. 223 slid 200 yards past the Lake Ronkonkoma station stop at 5:32 a. m. today. At Westbury—the next stop—it rolled 100 yards past the station. But at Mineola, it slid to a perfect stop and it didn't start up again. Conductor C. A. Geide walked forward to see what was wrong with motorman George E. Amberman.

Amberman was slumped over in his seat, one hand still on the throttle. At Nassau Hospital he was pronounced dead of heart disease.

Davey Trails Sawyer In Ohio; Bulkley, Taft Lead in Senate Races

The Day's Primary Picture

Ohio, Arkansas, Idaho and Nebraska early today were counting vast floods of primary election ballots, with these indications as the tabulations proceeded:

OHIO—New Deal Senator Bulkley was in the lead seeking renomination over former Gov. George White. For the Republican Senatorial nomination, Robert A. Taft, son of the former President, had a majority over Arthur H. Day, State Supreme Court judge. Gov. Martin L. Davey, asking renomination in the Democratic race, was trailing Charles Sawyer. Rural returns were expected to aid Davey

ARKANSAS — Senator Hattie Caraway had a narrow margin over Representative McClellan in the Democratic Senatorial primary. McClellan had charged Federal employes and officials with giving the only woman Senator undue assistance. Gov. Carl E. Bailey was slightly ahead of R. A. Cook in the Governorship contest.

NEBRASKA—First returns gave Gov. R. L. Cochran a commanding lead over F. C. Radke in his precedent-shattering attempt to win a third consecutive Democratic nomination. Charles Warner led for the G. O. P. nomination. No Senator is to be chosen.

IDAHO—Senator James P. Pope, ardent New Dealer, and conservative Representative D. Worth Clark were alternating in the lead in the Democratic Senate fight. Gov. B. W. Clarke (Democrat), seeking renomination was slightly behind former Gov. C. Ben Ross, who served three terms. Representative Compton I. White (Democrat) was unopposed for renomination.

Caraway Lead Reaches 4,000 At Half Mark

Bailey, Cook Nip and Tuck in Governor Race in Arkansas.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 9.—Senator Hattie W. Caraway—old friend to President Roosevelt—held a lead of 4,000 voters tonight in returns from 996 of 2,002 precincts in today's Democratic primary.

The woman Senator had 37,757 votes, against 33,586 for Representative John L. McClellan, of the Sixth District, who told the voters the Senate job was "a man's job." World War Veteran J. Rosser Venable was running far behind these two, with 836 votes.

After trailing in first returns, Gov. Carl E. Bailey, seeking second term nomination, drew in front by a slight margin over R. A. Cook, Little Rock business man. The returns from 974 precincts gave Bailey 36,320, Cook 33,962 and W. S. McNutt, prohibition candidate, 1,674.

In the six Congress races early scattered returns showed Claude A. Fuller of the Third District trailing State Senator Clyde Ellis.

In the second, County Judge Wilbur Mills led Roy Richardson. This seat was vacated last November by Representative John E. Miller, elected to the Senate.

In the sixth, a wide open race resulting from Representative McClellan's candidacy for the Senate, State Senator W. F. Norrell had 444, Kenneth Coffelt 146 and Joe Morrison 83.

Pope Trailing Conservative In Tight Race

Clark Is in Front of New Dealer; New Ballot Slows Up Count.

By the Associated Press.

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 9.—Senator James P. Pope, who campaigned on his record of "loyalty" to the Administration was behind his self-styled conservative Democrat opponent, Congressman D. Worth Clark, in the Idaho Democratic Senatorial primary tonight on early returns.

With complete returns from 187 of 802 precincts, Pope had 9,599 votes; Clark 9,572.

With 52 precincts reported, Donald A. Callahan, Wallace lawyer and mining man, held a wide lead over his two opponents for the Republican Senatorial nomination. The vote:

A new ballot, with the Democratic and Republican tickets printed on the same sheet with a circle at the top of each for the voters to designate party affiliations, slowed down the count.

The New Deal went on trial in Idaho as estimated 100,000 encouraged by balmy summer weather, registered their choice of Democratic and Republican nominees in the primary election.

The possibility of Republicans entering the Democratic primary to support Clark against Pope caused speculation. Some political leaders estimated thousands of Republicans would switch.

Gov. Cochran Out-Distancing Nebraska Rival for 3d Term

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 9 (AP).—Returns from 36 scattered precincts of 2,037 in Nebraska, gave Gov. R. L. Cochran a commanding lead tonight in his precedent-shattering attempt to win a third consecutive Democratic nomination. He had 1,678 votes compared with 536 for his nearest rival, Franz C. Radke, of Lincoln.

Charles Warner, of Waverly, led all Republican gubernatorial candidates with 1,655 votes. His closest opponent was Kenneth Gedney, with 437.

No senatorial post was open.

Foster May, Omaha radio announcer whose candidacy was indorsed by the C. I. O., conceded defeat tonight by Representative Charles F. McLaughlin, Omaha Democrat seeking his third term nomination.

Ed P. McDermott had 63 for one of 530 precincts compared with 55 for Representative Harry B. Coffee.

Representative C. G. Binderup, of Minden, was ahead of his Democratic rival and Representative Karl Stefan, of Norfolk, was opposed for the Republican nomination.

All are trying for third term nominations.

Radke said he was running "on his own" but friends of Democratic Charles W. Bryan, thrice former Governor at different times, said Bryan would enter the November race by petition as an independent if Radke's showing was creditable.

Present Senator Wins 2 to 1 Early Count Over White.

1,450,000 Votes May Set Record

Returns in Rural Areas Expected to Raise Davey's Total.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 9.—Robert Johns Bulkley, a Harvard classmate who became one of Franklin D. Roosevelt's staunchest supporters in the Senate, headed for Democratic renomination tonight.

Bulkley, mild-mannered, 58-year-old Clevelander who has been in the Senate since 1930, held a strong lead over George White, former Governor, in scattered returns from today's primary.

Reports from 3,388 of the State's 8,601 precincts gave:

Bulkley, 170,921; White, 90,148.

Davey, Day Trailing.

In the Republican race for the senatorial nomination 3,634 precincts gave Arthur H. Day, State supreme court judge, 94,226, and Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati attorney, 124,084.

Returns from 4,163 precincts put Martin L. Davey, outspoken foe of John L. Lewis, behind, although later totals from rural areas were expected to run in his favor. Charles Sawyer, Cincinnati lawyer, and Democratic national committeeman, had 196,550 votes to Davey's 182,034 for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination and the right to oppose John W. Bricker, former attorney general, unopposed for the Republican nomination.

Two candidates who campaigned on "100 per cent New Deal" platforms were in front of Congressman-at-Large Harold Mosier, labelled as anti-New Deal, in the Democratic race for two Congressat-Large seats.

Returns from 352 precincts gave: Stephen M. Young 9,023; Congressman John McSweeney 8,430, and Mosier 7,832.

Davey Graft Charged.

Taft, son of the late President William Howard Taft, and Judge Day, awaited in Cincinnati and Cleveland respectively the results of their intensive battle for the senatorial selection. Day charged Taft tried to "buy" the nomination, and Taft accused Day of "mud-slinging."

Democrats turned out strong to decide between Gov. Davey, seeking a third term, and Sawyer, for the governorship nomination. Davey described Sawyer as a "puppet" for John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, while Sawyer asserted that "graft and corruption" marked Davey's regime. Davey cast his ballot at Kent, Sawyer at Cincinnati.

Both contests attracted an estimated record 1,450,000 votes. Unofficial surveys indicated support for a prediction by the Secretary of State's office that Democrats would out-poll Republicans for the first time in Ohio's history.

Hunter, Lamneck Opposed.

The New Deal was a prime issue among Democrats in two other Congressional contests. The defeat of Representatives John F. Hunter, of Toledo, and Arthur P. Lamneck, of Columbus, was sought by candidates running on "100 per cent New Deal" platforms.

Five Democrats and one Republican Congressmen were renominated in Ohio without opposition. The Republican is Dudley A. White, Norwalk, in the Thirteenth District.

Democrat incumbents who had no contest were Joseph A. Dixon, Cincinnati, First District; Brooks Fletcher, Marion, Eighth; Robert T. Secrest, Caldwell, Fifteenth; Lawrence E. Imhoff, St. Clairsville, Eighteenth, and Robert Crosser, Cleveland, Twenty-First.

Treasury Agent Charged With Aiding McAdoo

Opponent Says 'Shakedown' Proof Is Withheld From Senate.

Charges of Treasury interference with investigation of the so-called "Five Per Cent Clubs" seeking reelection of a Democratic Senator in California, were filed yesterday with the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee by James W. Mellen, of Los Angeles, himself a Democratic candidate for the Senatorship.

At the same time, the Social Security Board was in receipt of a telegram from F. Harold Duboard, Democratic national committeeman for Maine, claiming that political discrimination is being practiced in the old-age assistance administration in that State.

Duboard has been asked for more specific evidence to back up his assertion that Republican officials are using political criteria in determining who is entitled to old-age assistance.

Earle Report a Puzzle.

Principal interest of the expenditures committee at the moment is the matter of segregating expenditures of Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, and Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia. Gov. Earle has filed, through a committee, a statement to the effect that he, with a ticket of three others, spent upward of $222,000 in making their races.

No effort by his committee to assign any portion of the $222,000 specifically to Gov. Earle has been made. The same situation is true of Mayor Wilson and a ticket of three others. The unsuccessful Philadelphia mayor admits to only $50 personal expenditure.

The Sheppard committee is anxious to have the sums expended for whole tickets of candidates broken down into their component parts and has forwarded requests for this to be done. The next meeting of the full committee at the end of this week will be taken up largely by the Pennsylvania situation.

Treasury Agent Named.

Mellen's charges regarding activity of Treasury officials in interfering with the committee investigation in California turns on the question of whether or not the McAdoo forces there are levying a 5 per cent tribute on Federal wage-earners to fill the McAdoo campaign coffers.

Mellen insists that this is so and that conclusive proof of it had been turned over to a purported agent of the intelligence unit of the Treasury Department, one A. Oftedal by name, in San Francisco.

Sometime previous to that, and after public charges had been made on the radio by James A. Chavalas, of Oakland, chairman of the anti-McAdoo League of Northern California, efforts had been made to procure surrender of this proof and withdrawal of the charge that there had been a "shake-down" in the office of the collector of internal revenue at San Francisco.

Hints Contempt Charge.

In view of these facts and the added fact that the purported "proof" has not been turned over yet to agents investigating for the Sheppard Committee, Mellen suggests to the Sheppard Committee that a check be made on Oftedal to see if he really is a Treasury agent or merely impersonating one.

"I want to know and the people of California ought to know," said Mellen, "whether evidence pertinent to the investigation by your committee is to be suppressed until after the primary is held.

"In any event, somebody evidently is interfering with the work of your committee. Whoever he is and whatever he is, he is in contempt of your committee and should be dealt with severely and at once."

Treasury Reassuring.

Mellen suggested that, since Senator McAdoo once was Secretary of the Treasury and since there are a number of men still in the Treasury who were his appointees, they might be "overzealous" in his behalf.

Treasury officials here last night admitted that an agent by the name of Oftedahl in the Internal Revenue Bureau had been assigned to the investigation.

While they have not heard from him and do not know for sure that he has the material which Mellen asserted was turned over to him, nevertheless, they assert that no trouble will be made about handing it over to the Sheppard committee if that committee expresses a desire for it.

U. S. Sets $125,000 For Fig 'Diversion'

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced yesterday a fig diversion program for California under which approximately $125,000 in benefit payments would be made for substandard figs diverted from regular channels.

The program is similar to the fig program operated in California for the 1937 crop.

Under this year's plan, benefit payments would be made on all substandard figs acquired by the Pacific Dried Fruits Association from growers or handlers of unprocessed dried figs.

Payments would be made to the association for proration among growers and handlers.

Goodwill Industries Afford Chance for the Handicapped

Snape, Executive Director, Tells How 134 Underprivileged Found Employment for 198,178 Hours in Year, Were Paid $26,468.

By Christine Sadler

Approximately 25,000 Washingtonians are regular contributors to the Goodwill Industries—saving their old clothes, old shoes, old furniture, magazines, books, and household goods until they have a load and then putting in a call for the Goodwill truck.

With this "waste" material the Goodwill Industies keep approximately 100 handicapped persons employed and are able to operate six stores in various parts of the city. In 16 workrooms, the grading, repairing, cleaning, upholstering and cabinet work take place.

The six stores are opened to sales from anyone, but for the most part are used by the underprivileged. In the main store near central offices at 1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest, according to W. Harold Snape, executive director, a man "can get a complete outfit for himself for $7."

Employes of the Industries may be handicapped by age, by deafness, by chronic heart trouble, by impaired vision or by being crippled physically. They may work part or full time, their employment being based largely on their need and physical condition.

During the first six months of this year, 134 different persons worked 198,178 hours and were paid $26,468. In the stores run by the industries more than 50,000 sales were made last year.

The Goodwill Industries, sponsored by the Federation of Churches, have been operating in Washington since 1935. The present buildings and equipment were made possible by gifts from persons interested in the welfare of handicapped people. Through sales of worked over "waste," the organization is from 75 to 85 per cent self-supporting. It is a member of the Council of Social Agencies and workes in co-operatively with churches and other social service enterprises.

Col. William O. Tufts is president of the organization. Snape has been the executive director since 1936, coming to Washington from Springfield, Mass., where he had directed a Goodwill Industries for ten years while pastor of the church which sponsored it. He takes an active interest in the Chevy Chase Methodist Church. He was a member of his college track team, plays a good game of tennis, and is interested in all athletics. He and Mrs. Snape have three children.

On Friday—A. F. E. Horn, president of the Rotary Club, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Move Under Way To Dismiss WPA Engineer in Okla.

By the Associated Press.

An informed person said yesterday an undated order dismissing Webster L. Benham as engineer of the Oklahoma Works Progress Administration, effective August 15, had been drafted by Oklahoma WPA officials.

Benham conferred yesterday with Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, who said he understood "an effort was being made" to dismiss Benham.

The Senator asked WPA officials to keep Benham in office until he could learn all the facts in the case.

"It seems like he is being made the goat of all the mistakes that have been made," Thomas said, "and some mistakes were certain to have crept in because the plans had to be made so fast."

Peru Ambassador May Be Next Dean Of Diplomats Here

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Dr. Manuel de Freyre y Santander, Ambassador of Peru, is in line soon to become dean of the Diplomatic Corps here, a post which this capital likes to believe is topmost pinnacle in the world of diplomacy.

Sir Roland Lindsay, Ambassador of Great Britain and present dean, already has reached retirement age, and will return here after his forthcoming vacation in England only in the event of urgent matters connected with the pending reciprocity trade agreement.

Dr. Freyre, professional diplomat of lifelong experience, was accredited here July 24, 1930, less than four months after Lindsay.

Cornfield Rally To Start G.O.P. Drive in West

Republicans Expect Substantial Gains in Midwest.

The Republican drive in the Middle West, where the party expects to make substantial gains in the Seventy-sixth Congress to be elected in November, will get under way August 26 with a two-day "Cornfield Conference" at Capehart Farms, near Washington, Ind.

Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee of the House, has been selected as keynote speaker at the mass meeting August 27, for which accommodations are being made for 50,000.

The occasion will mark the formal launching of the Republican campaign in Indiana as well as conferences among national committee chairmen, Congressional and State candidates from Ohio, Virginia, Kentucky, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas, Minnesota, South Dakota, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Capehart to Be Host.

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Representative Joseph W. Martin, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee; Senator John G. Townsend, jr., chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, and Marion E. Martin, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee in charge of women's activities, will attend.

The owner of Capehart Farms, Homer E. Capehart, vice president of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., manufacturers of musical instruments, is chairman of the rally committee and will be host at the luncheon for the Republican workers.

"On Our Way to Victory."

The plans provide for the erection of 38 tents, one of which will be capable of covering crowds in case of rain. It will require four kitchens to prepare luncheon and 350 waiters to serve it. Parking space is being prepared for 20,000 automobiles. Special trains will bring Indiana Republicans directly to Capehart Farms.

Arch N. Bobbitt, chairman of the Republican State central committee, who with Capehart is in charge of arrangements, explained this rally illustrated the determination of Indiana Republicans in this year's campaign.

"We are on our way to victory," Mr. Bobbitt declared. "This rally is only the opening gun of the Indiana fight. We shall elect a Republican to the Senate and we shall increase the Republican representation from Indiana in the House."

325 Army Planes To Fly for Legion National Meeting

Three hundred and twenty-five Army planes will take part in the American Legion's National Convention parade next month at Los Angeles.

Col. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, yesterday announced that a dozen "flying fortresses" would be in the mass demonstration.

Included also will be all three wings of the General Headquarters Air Force, commanded by Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, who will lead the formation in his C-33 "flying headquarters."

Brig. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commander of the First Wing, will lead the detachment from Hamilton and March fields, Calif. The Second Wing, stationed at Langley Field, Va.; Mitchell Field, N. Y., and Selfridge Field, Mich., will be led by its commander, Brig. Gen. Arnold B. Krogstad. Gen. Frederick L. Martin will command the Third Wing, stationed at Barksdale Field, La.

Among the "flying fortresses" from the Second Bombardment Group will be the six which flew 11,000 miles to Buenos Aires and return last February, and three which flew from Miami, Fla., to Bogota, Colombia, last week.

Within the year the Army expects to have 40 "flying fortresses" in service, officials said.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt's Popularity Still High in Southwest Despite Drop Since 1936.

The above map shows President Roosevelt's popularity, as measured by surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion, at important points along the route of his trip to the Pacific.

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Aug. 10.—President Roosevelt's return to the political wars, after his Pacific fishing cruise of the past 24 days, carries him at once into two States where his personal popularity is still at high levels.

In Florida, where President Roosevelt disembarked from the Houston yesterday, the President has the support of two voters out of every three at the present time, according to the latest popularity survey of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

And in Georgia, where he goes tomorrow to receive an honorary degree at Athens and deliver a speech at Barnesville on the site of a rural electrification project, nearly three voters in every four support him.

The President's midsummer travels have taken him—almost from first to last—through areas where his own popularity and that of the Democratic Party is relatively great. He has covered the Ohio Valley, the middle South, Texas and the Far West, and he now returns to Washington via the Southeast.

Only twice, in Ohio and in Kentucky, did the President venture into territory which is near the 50-50 line at the present time, according to Institute surveys.

Lost Ground Since '36.

The President's present trip has missed the heart of the farm belt and the industrial areas of the East and Northeast, where opinion is closely divided and where Institute surveys have shown the likelihood of substantial Republican gains in Congressional seats this November.

Accordingly, the cheers and applause for the President along his route have given an incomplete impression of his popularity throughout the country as a whole.

Actually, as the Institute's Nation-wide survey of July 10 showed, President Roosevelt is about 6½ points below his figure on election day, 1936. The drop is approximately equal to about 3,000,000 votes, but it leaves the President still with a substantial majority of the voters.

In the States the President visits today, his popularity is down from election day figures of 1932 and 1936.

Florida and Georgia.

In Florida, which has been Democratic in every national election for decades, with the exception of the Al Smith-Hoover election of 1928, the President has 67 per cent of the voters behind him today, nine points below his vote in 1936, the Institute survey shows.

FLORIDA.

| | For Roosevelt | Against Roosevelt |
|---|---|---|
| 1932 Election | 75% | 25% |
| 1936 Election | 76 | 24 |
| TODAY | 67 | 33 |

In Georgia the President's loss has been even sharper. Seventy-two per cent of the Georgians interviewed in the Institute's recent survey declared they were for the President, while 28 per cent said they were against him. This is a falling-off of 15 points since 1936.

The six-year trend has been:

GEORGIA.

| | For Roosevelt | Against Roosevelt |
|---|---|---|
| 1932 Election | 92% | 8% |
| 1936 Election | 87 | 13 |
| TODAY | 72 | 28 |

Whatever popular support Roosevelt has lost in the Deep South does not mean a corresponding gain for the Republicans, of course. If there were a vote on Roosevelt in the South today, many Democrats who are "against Roosevelt" in today's survey would undoubtedly refrain from voting rather than vote against the Democratic Party.

To measure the trend of President Roosevelt's popularity since he started across the country five weeks ago, the Institute has been conducting a new survey of rank and file voters in all parts of the country. This test, which will show how the President stands only three months from the fall elections, will be published next Sunday, August 14, in The Post.

August Corn Crop Estimate Today

By the Associated Press.

Federal farm officials yesterday engaged in speculation about the August corn estimate to be made today.

The law provides that if it indicates excessive supplies, Secretary Wallace must order a referendum to determine whether corn growers want a marketing quota for this year's crop.

The law defines excessive corn supplies as 17.7 per cent more than needed for normal domestic and export needs.

Polling in Beer Garden Brings Out the Voters

Fayetteville, Ark., Aug. 9 (U.P.).—primary officials today decided it was too hot in a garage which had been designated as a voting booth. The officials moved the booth across the street to a beer garden. A record number of voters proceeded to cast ballots.

Farley Shuns Row Among Minnesota Democratic Heads

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 9 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley was somewhere on Lake Superior today, steaming homeward from his Alaska vacation, but Minnesota's tangled Democratic situation was as involved as before his visit.

A new complication was tossed into the scramble last night when, shortly after Farley had adjured Democrats to avoid Republican alliance, Elmer J. Ryan, the State's only Democratic Representative in Congress, announced he would support Harold Stassen, his old law partner, Republican candidate for Governor.

Farley left the Democratic intraparty scrap, headed by Thomas Gallagher, gubernatorial candidate, on one side, and Joseph Moonan, chairman of the State central committee, on the other, about as he found it. Moonan, a leader in the "rump" faction that split away from the "regulars" six years ago, was elected chairman over Gallagher's protests. Both leaders had expressed hope Farley's visit would resolve the differences.

You Lost Dime in July, U. S. Cash Report Says

The Treasury said the July 31 total of coin and currency in circulation was $6,451,875,132, or an average of $49.57 per person. A month ago the average was $49.67 and a year ago $49.95.

Don't Be Hard On Wife, Begs Seized Bandit

Trembling Bird Confesses '6 or 7' Holdups at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Aug. 9.—Police questioning Charles Bird, 26-year-old desperado and one-time "Public Enemy No. 2," said today he boasted his crime career had netted "about $100,000," and that he would never be tried here because he was wanted "for better cases in other cities."

Last of a Midwestern gang of bank robbers, Bird was captured here last night as a result of a tip provided by an observant 16-year-old boy. He will be given a hearing tomorrow, officers said.

His attractive 24-year-old wife, an expectant mother, who was captured with him, broke into hysterical sobs under questioning.

Later she told the questioners: "I'm sick and can't talk. I'm going to have a baby. I didn't find out my husband was a holdup man until six months after we married. Then the only thing I could do was to string along with him."

In the next room, Bird trembled visibly. Detective Capt. John Cooney said he pleaded "I'll tell you what you want to know, but please don't be hard on my wife. I love her. She didn't have anything to do with any of these holdups.

"Please let me kiss my wife—I know I'll never see her again. I'll be sent up for life."

Capt. Cooney said Bird admitted a $1,000 brewery robbery here and "six or seven" lesser holdups, but with a show of bravado, said he only "fooled with that punk stuff" until he could find a partner to help rob half a dozen banks he had "cased."

William Clarkson, 16, a witness of a liquor truck robbery a week ago, furnished the description of the new green motor car driven by a woman in which the robber escaped. Detectives checked 50 newly purchased cars that fitted the description and traced one to Bird. They watched his home six days and nights to close the trap.

served that "it would be useless" for the House committee to begin hearings because Judge Schaeffer impounded material gathered by District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, a Republican, for the grand jury.

The county jurist's order, also up for decision by the Supreme Court on an appeal, kept Shelley and former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti from testifying to the legislators of their knowledge of the charges of blackmail, extortion and coercion of State employes flung in the May primary campaign. Margiotti hurled most of them.

Cohen said the House committee probably would be recessed indefinitely.

Judge Schaeffer said "I am satisfied to let the Supreme Court consider the whole question." The high court had the case soon after the charges were made. At that time it refused Gov. Earle's plea to prevent a grand jury inquiry and turned the decision over to Judge Schaeffer.

at Gainesville, I think. His big car stopped at the service station where I and about 15 of the boys was a-settin' and he and his chauffeur got out and went inside for a coke. They didn't say anything to us when they was a goin' in, while they was there, or while they was a comin' out. He didn't shake a single hand. Well now each of us has plenty of kinfolks, and that little thing there cost him nigh on to 500 votes, which is all they is in our county."

Talmadge Stars on Stump.

But George has powerful friends among the planting aristocracy of the State. His opponents charge the utilities are behind him. It is certain this former State Supreme Court judge, a farm boy who taught school to finance a law career, has a solid and substantial following of what is generally termed the "best people," and he has been careful to retain this friendship during his 16 years in the Senate. Twice up for re-election he was without opposition of any sort until this year.

George, however, is on the dullish side on the stump, and this is a State that loves a show. Camp is naturally fluent and easy-mannered, but it is Talmadge who enchants the voters into talking back to him—who promises them repeal of the postage so that the use of the mails will be entirely free, who is the showman in the Senate race. He will be in Tifton, heart of the bright-leaf tobacco country, tomorrow.

Today, without emotion, 83 citizens of the town of Richland, Ga. (population 1,577) sat flicking away wandering flies for an hour as they listened to the bellicose oratory of Camp, 39-year-old attorney, who is the New Deal's only hope, in the weird three-way Senate race.

"Tight," Says Old Timer.

Camp's lack of effect sprang from the fact that this is the heart of territory now evenly divided between George and Talmadge.

So said old J. J. Gordy, of Richland, former United States marshal, who revealed he is boss of Richland's 800 votes.

Offering all and sundry a "free chaw" to prove that he gnaws only the best plug that money can buy—an exceptionally rich-looking brown chunk which he treasured in a shirt pocket (only upper-strata politicians wear coats in Georgia in the summer), Mr. Gordy said:

"It's a little early to tell much as yet. If President Roosevelt puts butter on Mr. Camp come Thursday, they're going to have a mighty tight race in this State, Suh, a mighty tight race."

Gordy's opinion, while worth while in itself, is the more so in that it accurately reflects the tensity with which the President's visit is awaited.

Rivers Holds Advantage.

In the gubernatorial race Rivers easily outstrips his opponents, Hugh Howell, former Talmadge lieutenant; J. J. Mangham and Robert F. Wood, rather colorless lawyers. Rivers has one stunt which would have been the envy of Happy Chandler in Kentucky. He has a record-book, each page of which is 7 feet tall and done in screaming colors and huge poster type visible into the next county. There are ten pages in this book, and each portrays a vital portion of the blessings his administration has wrought for Georgia.

Rivers has a superbly organized State machine, and one is needed to win an election in Georgia. This State still has the county unit system, and plenty of counties, 159. Under this system the total vote in each county merely selects an apportioned number of votes to the State committee, and the candidate with the most unit votes wins, not necessarily the one with the largest popular vote. Thus the largest county, Fulton, which contains Atlanta's 270,000 people, casts only six votes for major offices. The next eight counties each have four votes, the next 40 three and the rest have two. Thus it can be seen that to win the unit votes of three small counties counts as much in the results as that of Fulton County.

60 Prince Georges Republicans Pick Own Party Slate

Displeased with the county's candidates for the State Central Committee chosen by party leaders, 60 Prince Georges, Md., Republicans met last night at Marlboro courthouse and picked a slate of their own. It included three of the original candidates and four of their own choosing.

Those named last night were Frank Small, jr., of Surrattsville; John M. Littlepage, of Bowie, and William Griffith, of Marlboro, all on the original slate, and Oliver Metzerott, of Mount Rainier; Kennedy Simms, of Beltsville; Joseph V. Wyvill, of Forestville, and Howard Proctor, of Brandywine.

Candidates passed over by the committee of five appointed from the floor last night but who had been named by G. O. P. county leaders, were Edgar F. Czarra, of Hyattsville, Sherman H. Hollingsworth, Mrs. Annette Fisher, of Seat Pleasant.

FHA Reports Loan Increases For 7 Months

All Divisions of Operations Show Rise, Lending Agency States.

The Federal Housing Administration yesterday reported substantial gains in building and property improvement loans for July and for the seven months a year ago. Since the FHA's amended program became effective last February, all divisions of operations of the administration have shown a rise.

In July small home mortgages selected for appraisal totaled $94,175,437, an increase of 100 per cent over the $47,162,173 for July, 1937. Mortgages accepted for insurance totaled $60,419,450, an increase of 61 per cent over July, 1937. About 70 per cent of the mortgages accepted by the FHA cover new homes, it is stated.

Last month the FHA made 34,605 property improvement loans with a value of $16,637,638, a new monthly high. July loans brought the total up to $67,931,196 since the amended act went into effect last February.

The rental housing division reported 66 projects valued at slightly more than $53,000,000 in operation or under construction as of July 31. Commitments to insure mortgages on an additional 73 projects had been issued, making a total of 139 projects valued at slightly more than $95,000,000 on which mortgages had been accepted for insurance as of July 31.

For the seven months ended July 31, small home mortgages selected for appraisal totaled $550,000,000, a rise of 44 per cent over the $381,000,000 selected for the corresponding period last year. For the period during which the amended FHA program has been in effective operation, mortgages selected for appraisal totaled $477,000,000, an increase of 61 per cent over the $297,000,000 selected for the corresponding months last year.

Mortgages accepted for insurance for the first seven months of 1938 totaled $338,000,000, representing an increase of 20 per cent over the corresponding period of 1937. For the five months begining March 1, and ending July 31, mortgages accepted total $300,000,000, an increase of 35 per cent over the $220,000,000 accepted for the corresponding 1937 period.

| Month | 1938 | 1937 |
|---|---|---|
| January | $29,904,199 | $38,786,750 |
| February | 42,612,638 | 460,42,118 |
| March | 95,161,202 | 68,045,452 |
| April | 94,156,113 | 67,886,307 |
| May | 96,108,623 | 58,232,578 |
| June | 97,231,622 | 55,184,630 |
| July | 94,175,437 | 47,152,173 |

During July 54.6 per cent of the monthly volume of applications for insurance covered small homes to be constructed under FHA inspection. This compares with an average of 54 per cent for the preceding four months.

Nazis Accuse Czech Official In Boy's Death

Berlin Charges Prague Has Called Three Reserve Classes to Duty.

Prague, Aug. 9.—Czechoslovakia was convalescing tonight after having suffered a bad case of nerves following the murder yesterday of a youthful member of Konrad Henlein's Sudeten German party. No other incidents occurred to disturb Lord Runciman's efforts to settle this country's problem with its minority.

Yet the death of Wenzel Bayer after a political argument in a saloon near Glaserwald was still being felt. The government read with anxious eyes the claim of the German press that a Czech official was involved, although this was denied. Tonight was heard with even more apprehension the statement over the Berlin radio station that Czechoslovakia had mobilized three classes and sent them to the frontier.

Sudetens Quiet.

The Czechs deny such claims as quickly as they are made, but the charges keep the country on edge. The Sudetens, however, still keep quiet despite the campaign from Berlin, although on Thursday they will give Bayer a "propaganda funeral." It will be their first since they buried the two men killed May 20, and those deaths came near precipitating real trouble.

Meanwhile, Lord Runciman continued his efforts to bring into agreement the seemingly opposite views of the government and the Sudeten. He saw Premier Hodza this afternoon, though it had been announced he would not confer with him until tomorrow. Later in the day he talked with the Sudeten negotiating committee that represents Konrad Henlein.

Other Minorities Wait.

It appeared today that Lord Runciman intends to concentrate his work in the immediate future on the Sudeten question and ignore, for the time being, the cases of the Hungarian and Polish minorities. Janos Esterhazy, Hungarian leader, who arrived here yesterday afternoon, learned he would not be able to have a talk with Runciman until Friday.

It was learned tonight Hodza would talk tomorrow with Ernst Kundt, chairman of the Sudeten negotiating committee, and Alfred Rosche, the party's legal expert. The meeting probably will serve as an opportunity to arrange for the schedule of future talks, since no direct negotiations between Czechs and Sudetens are contemplated for the immediate future.

The official explanation of the stabbing yesterday says the assassin was Robert Hoiden, an Austrian refuge, whose sister was killed in the unsuccessful Nazi putsch in Vienna in 1934. He was reported to have confessed. The Czechs, in answer to the German claim that a Czech official was involved, point out that Bayer was arguing with non-Nazi Germans, which, they said, was indicative of the fact that Henlein did not have the support of all of the Germans in the state.

Puerto Rican Aide Due Here to Study Anti-Trust Moves

San Juan, P. R., Aug. 9.—Enrique Cordova Diaz, an official of the Puerto Rican department of justice, will depart for Washington this week to take an intensive course in trust busting under Federal officials charged with enforcement of antimonopoly legislation.

On his return, Cordova will direct efforts to enforce the local anti-trust law, recently held constitutional by the United States Supreme Court. The insular law is a copy of the Sherman antitrust act, and the court held, in a suit against the Shell Oil Co., that both or either could be applied, since they did not conflict.

Premiers Cut Rest to Study Siberia, Spain

London Talks of Mediating Moscow-Tokyo Dispute; Waits on Franco.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 9.—British and French premiers today broke off their vacations to wrestle with problems arising from conflicts in Europe and the Orient.

Neville Chamberlain returned to London from Scotland; Edouard Daladier from the Riviera to Paris—the former with the explanation that his catarrah needed treatment and the latter saying he had enough rest.

But catarrah and rest notwithstanding, Chamberlain and Daladier were troubled by news of the persistent "incident" between Japan and Soviet Russia and the lack of news from insurgent Spain, Generalissimo Franco's failure to reply on the British proposal to withdraw foreign soldiers.

These were uppermost in the premiers' worries. But there were the run-of-mine central Europe problems with the German press currently engaged in fresh invective against Czechoslovakia.

Mediation Discussed.

The Far Eastern and Spanish situations raised these possibilities:

British mediation of the Russo-Japanese dispute. Ivan M. Maisky, Russian Ambassador to London, and a representative of the Japanese embassy conferred at the British foreign office with Sir Lancelot Oliphant, in charge during the vacation of Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax. An informed source said: "The question of mediation undoubtedly has been discussed by British officials, but they will take no steps in this direction unless invited by either the Soviet or Japanese governments."

Reopening of the French frontier to shipments of arms to the Spanish government unless Franco replies to the British plan for withdrawal of foreign soldiers.

Pyrenees Opening Urged.

In France the people's forum renewed demands for reopening the Pyrenees. Former Premier Leon Blum, urging increased pressure on insurgent Spain and Italy, wrote in the Socialist organ, Le Populaire:

"They must be made to realize that until withdrawal of foreign forces is effective, the republicans of Spain will not be cut off from all outside aid. There must in effect be a return to the practice of relaxed nonintervention."

Viscount Halifax will return from his Yorkshire home tomorrow to discuss the Far Eastern, Spanish and Central European problems with Chamberlain. The prime minister's physician announced Chamberlain would remain in London "a few days."

Chamberlain probably will see Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald Thursday on MacDonald's return from Palestine, where he gathered first-hand information on the conflict between Jews and Arabs.

Russian Artillery Bombards Japanese as Front Expands

Soviet

early in the afternoon. Then Soviet guns started a bombardment of "Hill 52" at the southern foot of Changkufeng. Approximately 30 shells landed on the height.

Japanese Guns Shelled.

From "Hill 52," a half-mile south, a battery of Japanese mountain guns began firing to the east, apparently against a Soviet tank charge.

Then the Russians laid down a blanket of fire along this hillcrest. After a half-hour's bombardment the formerly green ridge was scarred and smoking from the impact of at least 150 shells.

Soviet gunners, meanwhile, did not neglect the Tumen River fords northwest and west of Changkufeng. Shell after shell sent columns of dirty water into the air. The Russians never left off firing for more than two minutes at a time.

Japanese Version Lacking.

The Russian batteries appeared to be situated in the southeast and the east. Source of whatever Japanese return fire there was could not be determined.

Thus far today there were no Japanese communiques giving their version of a Moscow announcement, Sunday, that Japanese had been driven from Changkufeng. From the shelling, however, it appeared that if Japanese had been routed from the hilltop itself they had returned to the positions, which today were subjected to a withering fire.

A tour of the Korean swamp behind Changkufeng showed that Saturday's Soviet bombardment left a number of huge shellholes. It was in that bombardment that the railway station at Kogi was blown up.

A nearby first aid station had disappeared and there were dozens of shell craters in the vicinity. The Rashin Railway was severed north of Kogi, but trains still were running to a point near the break.

Japan Expands Front.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Aug 10 (U.P.).—The Japanese army today was reported massing additional infantry divisions at two other points on the Russian border in preparation for expected new Soviet attacks on Japanese-controlled territory.

The new military areas were reported to be the vital northeast triangle of Manchukuo opposite Soviet Far Eastern military headquarters in Khabarovsk and the disputed border region 1,500 miles to the westward, southwest of Manchouli, where a big salient of the Japanese Manchukuo dependency extends into Soviet-controlled Outer Mongolia.

The new moves were in line with fears of the imperial general staff that Russia has embarked on a deliberate policy of aggression in an effort to prevent a collapse of Chinese resistance to Japan following the impending Japanese occupation of China's provisional capital in Hankow.

Litvinov Warns Tokyo.

Moscow, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—The "informed" Journal de Moscow, regarded by diplomats as reflecting the views of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov, tonight warned Japanese militarists that if they succeeded in precipitating a Russian-Japanese war it will mean "the complete defeat of Japanese imperialism."

"The Soviet Union fully realizes that the Japanese militarists intend to draw Japan into war against the Soviet Union," the Journal said.

Berlin, Aug. 9.—The support Germany is prepared to give Japan in case of an aggravated armed conflict with the Soviet Union will be merely of a "moral" kind, Shigenori Togo, Japanese Ambassador in Berlin, was given to understand when he called on Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop yesterday. The German press did not mention the call.

This attitude by the Germans is probably prompted, in part at least, by the view of military circles here that Japan is not in a position to resist the Soviet Union successfully while engaged in an armed conflict with China.

Catalan Army Thrusts 'Deep' In New Drive

Loyalists Advance on 14-Mile Front Toward Rich Provincial Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 9.—Government troops crossed the Segre River between Lerida and Balaguer and advanced "deep" into insurgent territory in another sudden offensive on the Catalan border today.

Militiamen crossed the river by pontoon bridges about sundown, surprising Gen. Franco's forces north of Lerida and south of the bridgehead at Balaguer.

The drive apparently was over a front of about 14 miles.

If able to hold the conquered territory on the western side of the river and establish strong defense lines, the government would duplicate its feat of July 25 when militiamen began a surprise attack farther south, crossed the Ebro River and advanced in a southwesterly direction 12 miles to the outskirts of Gandesa.

Loyalists Drive Harder.

At that time loyalist forces halted the insurgen' offensive behind the strong Ebro-Segre line.

Before the new advance was announced, a series of hard-fought attacks by Gen. Miaja's central forces against insurgent defenses from Albarracin to the Teruel-Sagunto road had indicated a general offensive was gaining momentum in that sector.

The objective of the Segre River offensive apparently was the rich provincial capital of Lerida.

Dispatches from Barcelona said government forces captured many prisoners and seized vast quantities of war material of all sorts.

It was indicated stubborn resistance was met, which was quickly crushed, however, by sheer power.

Engineers vs. Aviators.

In the last two days, the South Catalonia operations of both sides had become largely a contest between insurgent airmen and government engineers—with the airmen bombing pontoon bridges across the Ebro and the engineers repairing and rebuilding them.

The central armies under Miaja, still had a trump card to play—an offensive on the Teruel front. Government sources said Miaja's previous actions, which had brought a government spearhead to the gates of Albarracin, about 20 miles west of Teruel, were all "feints" to test the strength of insurgent positions.

Bombers Kill 121 Cantonese, Leveling Acres

Death Toll Brought to 200 as Air Raiders End Second Day.

By the Associated Press.

Canton, China, Aug. 9.—Japanese bombers today carried out the second installment of their threatened ten days of aerial attacks on Kwangtung Province.

About 200 persons were killed in Canton, more than 300 were injured and scores were missing since the attacks started yesterday.

Tuesday—102 dead, 159 missing.

Acres Are Leveled.

Canton was plunged into gloom by today's three-hour bombardment in which whole acres of flimsy dwellings were leveled by the explosives, mostly 500-pound bombs.

Hundreds of homes in industrial districts of Canton were demolished. Five 500-pound bombs burst simultaneously in Taipingschan, laying waste almost 2 acres. Ten bombs wrecked the old waterworks.

School Demolished.

A bomb fell behind the Grand Theater where the film, "Mystery Squadron," was being shown. Debris was piled 30 feet high against the theater but the walls held. A bomb demolished the Forty-ninth Girls' Primary School which had been evacuated less than an hour before.

Kwangtung officials expected even greater attacks.

An Associated Press representative reported:

"I saw a demented father clamoring for the rescuers to dig for his entire family which was buried under 30 feet of wreckage. I saw a woman extricated from a mass of debris, unharmed, but a child strapped to her back and another held at her breast were dead."

Reinforcements Ordered.

Shanghai, (Wednesday), Aug. 10 (AP).—Twenty thousand Japanese reinforcements were ordered today to the Yangtze River battle front where sharp Chinese counterattacks had stalled the Japanese drive on Hankow's China's provincial capital.

The troops were on their way from Hofei, Anhwei Province capital, to Kiukiang, Yangtze River port and Japanese advance base 150 miles to the southwest of Anhwei and 135 miles downstream from Hankow.

Twenty-five miles north of Kiukiang Chinese forces assaulting Japanese at Hwangmei said 6,000 Japanese were encircled, but that Chinese could not dislodge them because it was impossible to bring up artillery in the flooded Yangtze valley area.

Virginia Woman Given 2 Years for Baby's Kidnaping

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 9 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Lee Childress, 43, was sentenced today to two years imprisonment for the "kidnaping" of 14-month-old Nelson Henry Boothe from his mother last January.

Convicted in United States District Court in Lynchburg June 15, Mrs. Childress was placed on probation for three years by Judge John Paul, who decided she had an "exaggerated mother instinct" which led her to take the baby from its mother, Lorene Boothe, and carry it to Rockville, Md.

Judge Paul was informed today that she had violated her probation by collecting $40 from colored people of Louisa County under the pretext that she was a Federal officer and could get old-age pensions for them at once. Judge Paul ordered her sent to the Federal Industrial Institution for Women at Alderson, W. Va.

Girl Writes To Hazen for A Playground

Elinor Sokolove Tells Him It Would Keep Children Off Streets.

As Washington's traffic record continued to show improvement with few accidents and only minor injuries reported yesterday, a little girl wrote Commissioner Hazen echoing the city-wide desire for safety.

Elinor Sokolove, of 1410 Webster street northwest, suggested to the Commissioner a method of safeguarding children in her neighborhood. Opening her note with "Dear Mr. Hazen," Elinor wrote:

"There is a vacant lot in back of the houses on Fourteenth and Fifteenth and Varnum and Webster streets northwest. I think that it would be a good idea to turn this lot into a playground to keep the children off the streets in this neighborhood.

"This is a wish of all the children."

Hazen Orders Inquiry.

Impressed by Elinor's communication, Hazen directed an immediate investigation by the Playground Department to determine chances of converting this vacant lot into a play yard with some sort of supervision and play equipment.

It was announced also yesterday by Miss Sybil Baker, playground director, that 123 play spots are now open throughout the city, supervised by her department and the Community Center Department.

"We now have an adequate number of playgrounds to care for all children in the District," said Miss Baker. "We lack only the co-operation of parents in sending their youngsters to these grounds instead of permitting them to play in the streets."

At the same time yesterday, the American Automobile Association launched plans to provide better equipment to entice children to the play yards.

"Many of the playgrounds have only a few swings and see-saws for the amusement of children," said Richard Ham, A. A. A. safety director. "These are not enough. Others are baked to a fever pitch throughout the day by the sun and it's no wonder kids won't stay on them."

One of the points in the A. A. A. safety program for children calls for improvement of play facilities. Hazen agreed to support this move.

Police Turn "Harsh."

And as police continued to apply "harsh" methods of traffic enforcement, a 20-year-old colored youth was brought to headquarters as the driver of a car which struck and killed one man and injured three others at North Capitol and O streets August 3.

Giving his name as Charles Wilson, 1508 Fifth street northwest, the youth was lodged in the District Jail charged with murder. His victim, who died in Freedman's Hospital, was George Slaughter, colored, 44, of 1630½ Tenth street northwest.

Wilson, who was surrendered by his attorney after police announced they were searching for him, was accused of striking three other persons after running down Slaughter. He took the injured men to the hospital, but fled when he heard a nurse telephoning police, according to investigators.

In Traffic Court yesterday, a directed verdict of acquittal freed Douglas Vincent, 22, 1026 Sixteenth street northwest, in connection with the death of Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, 62, 1308 Sixteenth street northwest, the District's fiftieth fatality victim.

Maj. Dalrymple, one-time national prohibition administrator, was struck July 4 in the 1600 block of Connecticut avenue northwest, and died the next day in Emergency Hospital. Vincent was held by a coroner's jury under the negligent homicide act.

Young Brothers Hurt.

Two young brothers were injured slightly when struck by a car yesterday near their home. They were treated at Children's Hospital, giving names of Garnell, 4, and Ellwood Lawson, 3. Both are colored and reportedly walked into the side of a moving car, suffering minor cuts and bruises.

Seven-year-old Thelma Roberts, colored, of 1316 W street northwest, received lacerations of the head yesterday when she ran from between two parked cars on Florida avenue near Sixteenth street northwest into the path of an automobile. She was treated at Children's Hospital. L. A. Bestpitch, 23, of Laurel, Md., driver of the car, was arrested and charged with improper use of dealer's tags.

Rothus Henderson, colored, 45, 918 Desmond court southwest, was knocked from his bicycle by a car near First and P streets northwest. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for several fractured ribs.

Joe Langford, 5, of Jackson, Miss., received a fractured left leg and possible fractured skull and is in an undetermined condition at Alexandria Hospital. The car, driven by his mother, was forced from the Mount Vernon boulevard, near Alexandria, and overturned. She escaped with minor hurts.

It is the aim of The Post and Junior Board of Commerce to reach and secure the support of Washington truck operators who have failed to fully realize their responsibility by demanding definite safety requirements of their drivers.

A total of 14,247 trucks are registered in the District. Of these 6,869 are classed as "light delivery" trucks and 7,378 are of the larger variety.

The Post-Junior Board program was indorsed yesterday by both Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent. Said Hazen:

"I heartily indorse The Post-Junior Board plan. Every truck driver and trucking concern—large and small—should undertake a definite safety program. Independent truck operators should be made to realize their responsibility on Washington streets."

Said Maj. Brown:

"This appeal to individual truck drivers and owners who are not already organized for safety is a step in the right direction. The police department will support this move to the letter."

In recent weeks, children of tender years have fallen victims to heavy truck traffic throughout the city. In some instances, the drivers were found to be at fault, but in most cases the youngsters themselves were to blame.

Of the 17 persons killed during the past year by trucks, drivers were arrested in seven instances. Six were held for negligent homicide and one for manslaughter. Ten cases were held to be unavoidable accidents.

Co-operating with The Post in its efforts to organize a safety standard among all types of trucking is Ross Guthrie, chairman of the Junior board's traffic committee, and W. Ashton Miller, local chairman of the National Civic Safety Committee.

Rail Stockholders Frozen Out in Plan Of Reorganization

By the Associated Press.

Reorganization of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co. without giving present stockholders any part of the new company was recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by one of its examiners.

M. S. Jameson, the examiner, said the commission should find that the equity of the holders of the railroad's common and preferred stock "has no value" and that the stockholders "are not entitled to participate" in the reorganization.

Under Jameson's proposal, new voting stock would be distributed to present bondholders. He said it was not the function of the commission to make any other provision for the future control of the D. & R. G. W. System.

THE REAL PLEASURE of cigarette smoking is what grower John Durham, Jr. is enjoying. It's a Camel. For, as Mr. Durham states, "I see the tobacco that cigarette companies buy. Camel takes the market's finest—they pay more to get the best of my own crops and of my friends. Knowing tobacco quality, it's Camels for us!"

PLANTER LEE MASON knows tobacco—he grows it. He says: "For a finer smoke, smoke finer tobacco. That means Camels to me and to most planters. Camel pays to get the best."

Is there a real difference in the tobacco that goes into various cigarettes? "Yes"—say the men who live with tobacco—the planters themselves. These planters grade their crops long before the warehouse sales. They know who buys their best grades. "Camel," say the typical planters on this page. "—Camel buys our choicest lots!" So, when it comes to selecting a cigarette for their own smoking, it's natural for planters to choose Camel's finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS. Try Camels today! Compare them for their taste, for their special mildness which permits steady smoking.

NLRB Cedes Hiring Point To Ship Firm

Charge Newport News Co. Discriminated Against Dismissed C.I.O.Men

By the United Press.

The National Labor Relations Board last night dismissed charges that the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Newport News, Va., had discriminated against five employes for union activity but ruled that the naval shipbuilder had violated the Wagner act by dominating an alleged company union.

The decision, which was unanimous, brought nearer a showdown in the conflict between the shipbuilding company and the board over labor practices. The fight has already been in the Supreme Court and it was not known, as the board ruled, whether it would go there again.

Officials believed that the company or attorneys for the "employes representative committee of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co." might fight that section of the order directing complete disestablishment of the unaffiliated committee, whose membership is confined to company workers. The board called the committee "incapable of serving the respondent's employes as their genuine representative for collective bargaining."

C. I. O. Filed Charges.

It was the dispute between Newport News and the NLRB which brought a Supreme Court ruling that board hearings cannot be enjoined in the courts and brought settlement of 97 injunction suits against the board.

When the board first issued a complaint against the Newport company in response to charges filed by the C. I. O.'s industrial union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, the company unsuccessfully sought an injunction to halt the procedings. The District and circuit courts sustained the board, as did the Supreme Court on January 31, 1938.

The company is one of the largest shipbuilding concerns in the United States. Between August, 1933, and October, 1936, it received Navy Department contracts for the construction of two airplane carriers, two light cruisers, and two destroyers at an aggregate cost of $71,096,000.

Reinstatement Sought.

Dismissal of the charges that the company had discriminated against five discharged workers for activity in the C. I. O. union constituted a victory for the shipbuilder and a defeat for the union, which had asked reinstatement of the men with back pay.

The NLRB said the evidence "did not support" the contention that John M. Darling, jr., had been discharged March 3, 1937 "for advocating industrial unionism." The company had contended he was a trouble-maker.

Four other workers—William H. Bell, Melvin L. Anderson, E. B. Wright, and Jesse Dillon—were laid off because of lack of work and not for union activity, the board held.

The company's contention that changes in its employe representation plan after the Supreme Court sustained the Wagner act had made it legal were overruled by the board.

Committee to Carry On.

Newport News, Va., Aug. 9 (AP).—Irvin C. Wilkins president of the employes' representative committee of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., said tonight he believed the committee's attitude would be to continue functioning, despite the order of the National Labor Relations Board for it to disband.

Wilkins said he believed this would be the consensus of the group, at least until there was "some disposition" of the matter in the courts.

Street Cameramen Held in Testing of Suffragette Law

Trial of two sidewalk photographers was continued in Police Court yesterday immediately after they were arraigned on charges of vending without a license and violating the "peace and order" act of 1892.

Observers said the case will decide the fate of almost 50 street cameramen who snap your picture and give you a card. For the card and 25 cents you get your likeness.

Louis Gold, 19, and Jack Rogoff, 22, both of New York, were the defendants to face trial under the obscure statute which had not been invoked since the days of militant suffragettes.

Following more than 100 complaints, Policeman George Weaver, First Precinct, arrested the youths and testified he observed them follow prospective clients and solicit money. He said the usual practice was for the person to mail the 25 cents to the picture company.

Judge John P. McMahon continued the case for one week to allow Assistant Corporation Counsel J. F. Reilly time to review it. Bonds were set at $20 each.

Familiar Story Back on Screen In Film, "Rich Man, Poor Girl"

Previewed Picture Is Third Adaptation of Play, 'White Collars;' More of Open-Air Theater; 'Antoinette' Preview; About Two British Stars; Theater Notes.

SEASONED picturegoers will recognize an old friend in "Rich Man, Poor Girl"—not so much in the person of any particular member of the cast, although several of them are popular favorites, but in the familiar contours of the story, which already has been filmed twice before by the same company under the title of "The Idle Rich."

BELL.

"Rich Man, Poor Girl," previewed yesterday by the oracular ladeez and gempmun of the local press and coming Friday to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest celluloid essay at the serio-comic social study embodied in Edith Ellis' stage hit of "White Collars," adapted to the screen, in this instance, by Joseph A. Field and Jerome Chodorov. The whole jolly business had its origin in a story called "Regular People," by Edgar Franklin. It was preserved in gelatin first by Metro in 1921 and the second time by M.-G.-M. in 1929, A. A. (after amalgamation).

For the benefit of celluloid memories that do not go back quite that far, this is the fable of the enormously rich young man who fell in love with his secretary and went to live with her humble family to demonstrate something or other about social equality. With the exception of father and mother, it was a slightly crackpot family. One cousin in particular, Henry Thayer was a half-baked parlor socialist, forever prating about the tough order it is to belong to the great middle class. So Bill Harrison took his word for it and "gave away" all of his money. With the prospects of $6,000,000 slipping through the family fingers, the household—all but Joan—really went beserk, only to find that the whole thing was a hoax, planned to jolt them out of their smug misconceptions of the economic functions of the "idle rich." You must remember that one.

One suspects that it has been resuscitated now under the urge of the tremendous success that has attended M.-G.-M.'s domestic comedy-dramas of the Hardy family. "Rich Man, Poor Girl" slips into the same groove and fits snugly.

Among the known quantities in the cast are such veterans as Robert Young, the star; Lew Ayres, who perpetuates the fine impression he made in "Holiday"—Lew isn't "coming back," he's back—Guy Kibbee and Sarah Padden. Those importantly assigned who are just coming along, so to speak, include Ruth Hussey, upon whom Myrna Loy and Rosalind Russell might keep an eye; Lana Turner, the siren with Mickey Rooney in "Love Finds Andy Hardy;" Rita Johnson, currently on view in "Letter of Introduction;" Don Castle, Gordon Jones and Virginia Grey.

"Rich Man, Poor Girl," by the way, is a nice picture. It always has been.

• • • •

It might be a good idea to keep this young blonde beauty, Lana Turner, in mind. She does a pleasant piece of work as the sirenic young kissing-bug, opposite Mickey Rooney, in the Hardy item, and displays a complete change of pace, as Helen Thayer in "Rich Man, Poor Girl," executing one of her scenes, facing the camera, in close-up with all the skill of an experienced emotional actress. Nice going, is what I always say.

Reverting, if it isn't too soon, to E. M. Loew's new open-air Mount Vernon Theater, rapidly taking shape on the Richmond highway, 3 miles below Alexandria, Va., it should be of interest to prospective patrons to know that the operating staff will include 24 ushers to assist in parking automobiles on the nine ramps that will have a capacity of 500 cars, with a clearance of 40 feet between ramps to facilitate movement; that special police will handle highway traffic and two boys will wipe the windshield of each car to insure perfect vision.

The distance from the last ramp to the screen is approximately that of the last row of orchestra chairs in the largest of the inclosed theaters.

The screen will measure 40 by 60 feet in size and will be inclosed in its own "house." The power for the oversize projection machine will be furnished by a motor generator located in the booth. Sound controls are placed on the field to regulate the volume of sound emanating from the nine horns in the screen house.

The theater will operate rain or moon and the admission will be 35 cents per person, children and cars free. So now you know.

• • • •

The postman's most important ring yesterday was to leave an ornate invitation from Rudolph Berger, Washington manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to attend the Washington preview showing of "Marie Antoinette," costarring Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power, at Loew's Palace Theater on Sunday at 10:30 a. m. This is one of M.-G.-M.'s hyper-super-colossals, directed by Woody S. Van Dyke and including such artists as John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Anita Louise, Joseph Schildkraut, Gladys George and Henry Stephenson among its supporting cast of hundreds. It will be presented as a regular Loew booking, at popular prices, within a few weeks, as already announced in a wire from Oscar Doob, of the New York office, published in this space. This preview, of course, is an occasion that may not be missed, but it nevertheless would be interesting to know why it was set for the middle of the night!

• • • •

The aforementioned Gladys George, in passing, created the role of Carole Arden in "Personal Appearance," now being played with such success by Dorothy Mackaill out at Mr. Cochran's Olney Theater. And that reminds me.

Just because Dorothy Mackaill is most vividly remembered by the greatest number of theatergoers as a star of the cinema it should not be surmised that her present excursion into the summer theater represents the first time she has had the glare of the footlights in her eyes and the smell of grease paint in her nostrils. She began her career on the stage.

Born in Hull, England, Miss Mackaill appeared first as a chorus girl at the London Hippodrome and led a "Chicken" number. When the Hippodrome closed, she went to Paris and did the same number in a big revue. Arriving in New York, her first engagement was with the "Ziegfeld Follies," where, again, she was leading numbers in practically no time. Although she had appeared in an occasional picture on the other side, her real screen career came after all this. Her first individual film success in America was in "Mighty Lak' a Rose," with James Rennie. Following this, she appeared opposite Richard Barthelmess in a succession of films made by Inspiration Pictures for First National release, beginning with "The Fighting Blade." The rest you know.

• • • •

Since there haven't been any previews lately, the Loew executives are shattering precedent by unreeling "We're Going to Be Rich" in advance, today at 1:30. This is the can of flicker coming into the Columbia on Friday with Victor McLaglen and Gracie Fields costarred. The Loew people are bearing down on the "rich" motif next week. But the point is that when Anna Neagle was here for the Washington premiere of "Victoria the Great," she called the attention of your reporter to the fact that there are only three ranking screen stars in Great Britain—Gracie Fields, Jessie Matthews and herself—and that, in her own country, the greatest of these is Gracie. She didn't mention who comes second. Coming from one star about another, that ought to be all the recommendation Gracie Fields needs to arouse interest in her first American release. And besides all that, she has to her credit a command performance before the reigning sovereigns of Great Britain and is a Commander of the Order of the British Empire, the English equivalent of the French Legion of Honor. Nice—but I've already said that back there somewhere.

with HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 9.

The Battle of Bunker Hill was as nothing compared to the entrance of Shirley Temple into the cloistered culture of dear old Boston.

HEDDA HOPPER

While Shirley lunched at the Humpty Dumpty roadside cafe on a main highway because she liked the name of the place—cook, waitresses and customers gathered about to take her picture and get her autograph. And traffic was held up for 15 miles by fans trying to get into the city to see her. Police reserves were called by radio.

Hundreds of determined people stood outside her hotel, while she was whisked through the crowd throwing kisses to them. Then up to the royal suite, left vacant a few days before by the Swedish royal family, to be greeted by 20 hardened newspaper reporters and the same number of cameramen, who tried, but couldn't trip or trap her into answering troublesome questions. She took all in her stride and won their admiration, hands down.

A few more like Shirley, and the picture business wouldn't have to spend millions for good will. Her mother, asked why Shirley was photographed in all her pictures on this tour with a bandana round her head, said, "Because I'm taking a vacation, too, and can't be bothered twisting all those curls round my finger trying to pretty her up."

That's our Glamour Girl No. 1.

Just as our fair maidens pop into stays and can hang on to their hips, the Department of Agriculture streamlines turkeys so poor American families won't get an overdose of hash. I've heard no complaints—but then I don't get about much.

And the Republicans slimmed down their elephant emblem so he could run faster—I suppose to see what the Democrats were up to. Oh, yes!

Dark-eyed Sheila Darcy got into pictures through a bet. She used to cashier at the Vendome Cafe. Proprietor Billy Wilkerson made a bet with his former wife, Edith, that he'd land a job for the brunette sooner than she could for the other cashier, a blonde. Sheila won—and is doing all right. The blonde could only stand pictures three months. Went right back to cashiering. She said: "You can have your picture jobs. I'd rather stay behind the counter where folks are folks."

But in her spare time she whipped up a story about the people who passed in and out—well, not completely—and sold it to a magazine for $500 and has another story ready for the press.

It took Will Durant's lectures at U. C. L. A. to get our girls out of their downies and into a classroom by 9. After meeting Mrs. Durant, I have a sneaking idea that she added many touches to that best seller of his.

Now, Mrs. Mervyn LeRoy, a member of his class, is in Saratoga helping her dad, Harry Warner, pick thoroughbreds. If they win, will Durant claim philosophy did it?

It seems incredible that Mrs. Columbo has never learned about the tragic death of her son.

The woman who put Jimmy Cagney on the stage 25 years ago, visited him on the set yesterday. He doubled for his brother who was playing a Chinaman.

Joan Fontaine motored 250 miles to Lone Pine to say two words "Oh, Johnnie!" in "Gunga Din." Maybe it was the altitude—she said: "Oh, Conrad"—and spoiled the take.

Comic Tosses The Bull About Talented Bull

Joe E. Brown Interviews 'Boots' Concerning Screen Career.

By Joe E. Brown.

Written for the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 9.—Crashing the gates of Hollywood, all current success stories to the contrary, is more difficult today than ever before. And no amount of "bull" or even sex-appeal can alter that situation.

This was butted home to me in forceful fashion during an exclusive interview which I obtained from filmdom's newest histrionic discovery, "Boots, the bull."

"Boots," let me hasten to explain, is the educated Texas bull that made his screen debut recently in a picture with Martha Raye. Inspired by his performance in that film, Producer David L. Loew has just signed the fellow to appear with me in our next production, "Flirting With Fate."

But "Boots," like thousands of other talented thespians, bucked against the figurative stone walls of Hollywood for many months before he was given recognition. Seated on a bale of hay, he received me for the interview, and calmly confided what a struggle it had been.

Wanted to Horn In.

"I pointed my horns toward Hollywood when I was only 6 months old, but pulled them in again when the producers sent word that there was already too much bull out here," said Boots. "So I toured my home State of Texas for two years, doing my stuff at the rodeos, carnivals and in night clubs.

"What did I do? Oh I had a regular routine—like any actor who treads the boards. I danced, I clowned and gave them my bag of tricks.

"After two years on the Texas circuits, I became as well known down there as Jesse Jones and Gov. Allred. Both of these fellows have posed with me in publicity pictures, and I let the Governor sit on my back several times. No, he didn't throw me.

"Then I came to Hollywood. That was a year and a half ago. With Herman Mosley, my trainer, we made the rounds of the studios. They said I was a handsome fellow, and had possibilities, no doubt, but it was the same merry-go-round wherever I went. Hollywood was just over-run with talent, and no matter how talented, I would have to wait for my opportunity. Several times I tried out for parts, but when it came to signing up, they gave the jobs to mules or monkeys."

Signed for $100 a Day.

"So," he snorted contemptously, "I played the Los Angeles and Hollywood hot-spots with my act. Whenever I saw a producer in the audience I played up to him. Finally, when they were casting for a Martha Raye picture, a producer from Paramount caught my performance—I won't say where—and the next day I signed a contract at $100 per day. And here I am."

It developed, after further questioning, that Boots, now 4 years old, and weighing 1,420 pounds, started training for his Hollywood career at the age of 3 months. Descended from registered Jersey stock, he has a beautiful dark-brown body, with four white legs, whence came his name. He eats a ton of hay and 60 gallons of ground corn per month. And he loves apples for desert. His favorite companion is the horse, Gray Buck, also an actor.

Asked how he liked Hollywood, now that he is one of us, Boots shrugged his big shoulders, and flashed a bit of temperament, which more than anything else convinced me he will go far in his chosen career.

"If they'll let me choose my own stories and give me dramatic instead of comedy roles, I'll like it better," he said.

Horse Actors Just Plain 'Lens Hogs'

Director Sam Wood had his hands full when he attempted to film scenes for "Stablemates," which include Seabiscuit, Dauber, Specify, Indian Broom and Lloyd Pan.

Seabiscuit seemed to be the worst offender in the film. He even tried to nudge Wallace Beery out of a scene they did together.

Finally, Wood decided to film each horse separately, on the advice of newsreel men, who said that racehorses were more difficult to handle than bucking broncos.

Sylvan Theater.

A full-mooned, breezeless and breathless evening last night lured uncounted thousands to the National Sylvan Theater, at the base of the Washington Monument, to view a revival of Dion Boucicault's sturdy old Irish melodrama of "The Colleen Bawn," first produced in this country almost three-quarters of a century ago, resurrected many times since, but not presented in Washington for many years.

It was a variegated program that aided those in attendance in forgetting the oppressive heat of a sultry August Tuesday. Preceding the performance of the Boucicault play was a half-hour program by the Washington Gaslight Co. Employes Band, under the conductorship of Otto Siebeneichen, and entr'acte diversion was offered by the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group in a diversified program of popular songs of Erin. The ensemble singing was understandably ragged as to tempo, by reason of the singers' remoteness from the accompanying piano, presided over by Miss Wentworth, their director. The solo numbers fared better.

"The Colleen Bawn," a violently melodramatic story of three unwanted wives, tangled lives and threatened fortunes on the ould sod, was enacted by the Langley Lambs Club with fine spirit and at a brisk pace, under the direction of Forney Reese, who also appeared in the cast in the role of Father Tom.

Jane Lawrence, Margaret King and Betty Rumsey appeared in the principal feminine roles of Eily O'Connor, Anne Chute and Mrs. Cregan, with Carol Jasperson as Sheelah. The foremost male roles—heroes and villains in about even measure—were portrayed by Larry Lawrence, as Hardress Cregan; Lonny Allison, as Danny, his faithful servant; Raymond Maryiam, as Kyrle Daly, young naval lieutenant; Roy Bartsche, as Miles, and Frank Anderson, as Mr. Corrigan.

Cross Roads

Your reviewer saw some ghosts last night. What's more, Mr. Ogden Nash, they were of the bovine ilk.

It happened in the comfortable hayloft of the Cross Roads Theater Players, out in Virginia, where prolific Owen Davis' popular thriller, "The Ninth Guest," is the attraction.

Every active barnstormer knows that the setting of the Cross Roads Theater is blissfully bucolic. It's a pleasant hayloft, where there is an abundance of red paint and the traces of hay and grain make one realize that it could not have been too long ago that the cows, the chickens and the horses were the chief players in this pleasantly peaceful setting. The memory of its past is strong upon you.

So the moderne (and we mean "moderne") penthouse, to which eight worldly successes are invited for a unique party, must be viewed with amazement by some of the older bovine shades. Just who invites these guests, and for what revenge, must afford the unmooing wraiths some pleasant evenings' speculation. Will the audience, which has presumably frogotten the details of the plot, be able to guess the mystery of the sudden deaths? Yes, those disembodied bull-baiters must have amusing evenings.

As for the play and how it's done, we must admit that to us it seemed the Cross Roaders had slipped some in their end of this midsummer night's dream. They have done better. They have played with a surer touch. Perhaps they too saw the bovine shades. Sometimes they acted as though they had. Don Sisler was not afraid, however, he played journalist Peter Daly smoothly and with an ease which should have been contagious. Decorative Ruth Hay came to too violent an end as Mrs. Chisholm. Frances Green was a fairly credible woman lawyer and we bet that William Draper, as Hank Abbott, lost that university job because of radical tendencies.

Carroll Takes Stand Today in Own Defense

By the United Press.

South Paris, Me., Aug. 9.—The State completed its case late today against former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll, charged with slaying a country doctor and forcing his daughter's sweetheart to confess the crime.

Carroll will take the witness stand in his own defense tomorrow morning, his counsel announced tonight.

When Prosecutor Ralph M. Ingalls rested this afternoon, he had presented 36 witnesses to link Carroll by direct and circumstantial evidence to the murder last October 13 of James G. Littlefield.

Conviction of Carroll would mean a life sentence for the ousted deputy and a possible pardon for Paul (Buddy) Dwyer, 19, who had a passionate romance with Carroll's 17-year-old daughter Barbara. Dwyer was sentenced to life imprisonment last December 2 after pleading guilty to the murder.

Defense Counsel Clyde R. Chapman tomorrow intends to present as witness not only Carroll, but the defendant's daughter, Barbara, and his wife.

As the trial entered its eighth day today, the State presented perhaps its most telling testimony in corroboration of Dwyer's contention Carroll committed the murder for which the youth was imprisoned.

An 18-year-old high school girl, pretty Hazel Talbot, testified she saw Carroll in his parked car outside Dwyer's home—the murder scene—less than an hour before Dr. Littlefield was slain.

The last of 16 witnesses heard today was Deputy Sheriff Sidney Verrill, who admitted most of the evidence presented against his former colleague was found by him.

He began his investigation December 2—the day that Dwyer pleaded guilty and later told Verrill the "true story" of the slaying—with the intention of "clearing Carroll's name."

Baltimore, Aug. 9.—A coat of arms and a tumultuous welcome was given to Douglas Corrigan today when he landed in this city for which he mistook Boston on his wrong-way flight to Ireland.

He learned from Mayor Jackson that Corrigan means "little hero" and that the Gaelic scroll which festooned the Shamrock-bedecked coat of arms translated to "by wisdom and bravery."

Bright sunshine peeped through as the long motorcade headed for the city hall, where there were speeches, presentation of a key to the city which Corrigan wondered "if it could get into the city treasury," and the family insignia.

Coed Assailant Given 2 Terms Of Life in Jail

Boy, 19, Sentenced 30 Hrs. After He Is Caught; Admits 8 Crimes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 9.—Virginia justice struck swiftly today as James Spurling, 19, of Charlotte, N. C., was given two sentences of life imprisonment 30 hours after he had been arrested for attempted criminal attack, holdup with a gun and six lesser crimes.

The youth pleaded guilty to all charges, including an attempt to assault criminally a University of Virginia summer school student, and a holdup of L. E. Holmes, colored janitor.

A special grand jury indicted Spurling this afternoon and, after brief questioning, Judge A. D. Dabney in Corporation Court passed sentence.

Advises No Pardon.

Judge Dabney recommended that neither Gov. Price nor any future Governor of Virginia pardon Spurling, whom he described as a hardened criminal. In the court's opinion, he said, Spurling was sane; but, if he should be found to be criminally insane, he should be sent to the State Hospital at Marion.

The court informed Spurling that he could be sentenced to the electric chair on the criminal attack charge or for threatening Holmes with a pistol. Maximum sentences on the six other charges, ranging from attempted entrance to breaking into residences and larceny were imposed.

Judge Dabney, before passing sentence, explained that for a quarter century it had been the policy of the corporation court to show mercy to youthful criminals, but that the court also gave severe punishment where warranted to deter others from crime.

Knocked Victim Unconscious.

Detective James Adams quoted Spurling after his arrest as saying he struck the coed in the face when she awoke to find him ransacking her room and then chocked her into unconsciousness. The detective said Spurling told him he had drawn his gun and was planning to kill her when he heard voices outside and vaulted through an open window to escape.

Chief of Police Maurice F. Greaver said Spruling confessed the following charges:

Breaking into the home of Everett E. Ramsey; attempted entry into the home of Mrs. J. S. Carpenter; attempted entry into the home of Mrs. G. T. Reed; attempted entry into the home of Mrs. W. P. Graham; entry into the residence of John Reitz, and breaking into the home where the coed was a guest.

Chicago Vice Nemesis Falls Dead on Street

San Francisco, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Frederick Crossley, 60 former Northwestern University law professor, identified with efforts to stamp out racketeering and vice in Chicago after the Al Capone gangster era, fell dead on a street here today. Unable to get legal work in the depression, Crossley was employed by the WPA.

Landlord Sues for $43; Tenant Puts Debt at $84

New York, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—William C. Austin, a scales repairer, said today in municipal court that he owed Henry Kraemer $84 for back rent, not $48, as was alleged. Remarking, "the miracle of the age has happened here," the court signed the $48 judgment.

Marines, Guard Keep Busy at Camp Ritchie

Engineers Try Out New Pontoon Bridge, Barbed Wire Posts.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., Aug. 9.—Resembling a small battlefield, Camp Ritchie today was alive with activity as Marine reserves and National Guardsmen forged through maneuvers.

The Marines took over the parade ground and rifle range for target practice while the 121st Engineers marched off to the hills and the lake shores for construction practice.

Company C of the Engineers put together a new type of bridge which replaces the old pontoon structure. It is simple and easier to handle. It consists of pontoons 14 feet apart supporting duckboards. The pontoons are constructed of five-gallon airtight cans, held together by wooden frames.

Another new implement of the Engineers used to erect barbed wire entanglements this morning was a streamlined screw post resembling a giant cork screw. This post is of heavy bar steel with several hooks evenly spaced. The cork-screwed end is turned into the ground and the barbed wire attached to the hooks. Small poles are also provided having only one hook. Their object is to trip the enemy soldier.

The band this morning played a concert for the patients of the State Sanatorium at Sabillasville, Md.

The map section of the headquarters and service company has been surveying an area through the nearby woods for a road to be built by the other companies.

Company F has won the kitchen efficiency flag almost constantly since being in camp. Mess attendants from all other companies have been requested to pattern their kitchens after it, according to First Sergt. Stanley Phillips.

A. F. G. E. Asks Civil Service in Revenue Office

Legislation Sought to Add Excluded Groups to Merit System.

Legislation to bring into the classified civil service all positions in the offices of collectors of Internal Revenue which are excluded by statute, will be sought in the next Congress by the American Federation of Government Employes.

Executive orders issued by the President on June 24 brought into the civil service thousands of employes whose positions are in agencies and departments not excluded by statute from merit provisions, but there remain many positions specifically legislated from civil service provision.

It is these on which the A. F. G. E. will seek legislation. The first bill the organization has framed aims at civil service status for all jobs under Internal Revenue not of a policy-determining nature. Other bills will be prepared as it is learned precisely what groups will not benefit from the executive order.

The A. F. G. E. saw "considerable merit in the passage of such a bill because of the high-class personnel now included in the offices of collectors of internal revenue.

The same treatment by special legislation will also be attempted by the A. F. G. E. [redacted] every other group now prevented by statute from inclusion in the civil service provisions, it was said.

MAKE THIS REVEALING CHECK FOR BOUQUET, BODY, AROMA, FLAVOR

USE A "SNIFTER GLASS", SOMETIMES CALLED A "NOSE GLASS"
A tulip-shaped, thin, clear glass — holding about 4 ounces if filled to the top—but which is provided with an etched line as a marker where to stop pouring. If you don't own one of these glasses, use ordinary brandy snifter.

1 Fill the "snifter glass" to the line.
2 Now carefully warm the "snifter glass" with the whiskey in it.
3 Pour the whiskey, which you are checking, out of the glass.
4 Warm the glass again (rolling it between the hands).
5 Shake out the glass until you see it has become almost dry.
6 After 1 HOUR pick up glass, warm in hands, and note bouquet.
8 After 12 HRS. again warm glass and repeat check.

NOTE—If the bouquet still lingers after this protracted period, you hold in your possession a whiskey which has passed the most severe check that any whiskey can undergo.

SCHENLEY'S BONDED BELMONT PASSES THE CHECK WITH FLYING COLORS!

As you may well imagine, it takes a truly great whiskey to pass a check as severe as this. To our knowledge, there is one whiskey on the market today that can meet it . . . Bonded Belmont. For Bonded Belmont is the real old-style Kentucky Bourbon of luxury unlimited...a Bourbon of body, bouquet and flavor deep as a diamond...a veritable gold mine of good taste!

More Home Building.

Evidence of a revival in the home construction industry continues to pile up. Once more the Federal Housing Administration reports phenomenal gains in the number of small homes selected for appraisal and those accepted for mortgage insurance. Perhaps more significant for the moment, however, are reports of increased building activity from other sources.

For several months the FHA has been showing remarkable gains in the insurance of mortgages. The number of applications for mortgage insurance during July represents a 100 per cent increase over the record of the same month a year ago. Mortgages accepted for insurance show a 61 per cent gain. The construction of large-scale rental projects has also been stimulated. FHA has made possible the development of 139 projects of this type valued at more than $95,000,000.

This and similar optimistic reports from the same source have raised a question as to how much of the new business facilitated by the FHA represents actual construction gains and how much a greater use of that agency by home finance institutions. The query is partly answered by findings of the Department of Commerce that building permits increased during July over the same month last year in a number of large cities, including New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Minneapolis, Dallas and Buffalo.

Likewise, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports that residential construction is again on the upgrade. Obviously there is more building being done as well as more general utilization of the FHA's modernized mortgage system. That is a factor of real significance in the recovery movement now under way.

New Stalemate In Spain.

The furious counter-offensive launched by Gen. Franco along the Ebro River has apparently stopped the Spanish government forces and even compelled them to give way at certain points. Two weeks ago the loyalists assumed the offensive. Now they are definitely on the defensive and the towns of Gandesa, Caspe and Teruel, the objectives of their recent drive, remain safely in nationalist hands.

But the net result of the past fortnight's violent and sanguinary struggle for possession of the west bank of the Ebro is far more favorable to the government than to the insurgents. To meet a well-planned and well-executed attack by government troops, Franco was forced to withdraw large numbers of men and supplies he had assembled for his great offensive against Valencia. Whatever the immediate outcome of the present Ebro struggle, it is now improbable that the insurgents will be able to resume that offensive this summer. By the same token, Franco now faces indefinite postponement of that final victory which he had expected to achieve this year.

Were it possible at this moment speedily to carry out the British plan for the withdrawal of all foreign combatants in Spain, and thereby effectively to isolate the Spanish struggle, a renewal of the hitherto abortive efforts to terminate the civil war might this time lead to success.

The government has shown very remarkable defensive capacity. Observers are united in agreeing that its spirit is unbroken. But there is no immediate likelihood of crushing the rebellion. On the other hand, Franco now faces a prolonged stalemate and increasing shortage of manpower. This is emphasized by his action in calling 18-year-old boys to the colors.

The general situation, of concern to all European statesmen, places Mussolini in particular on the horns of a bitter dilemma. He has made the cause of Franco his own. He has repeatedly proclaimed Italy's interest in the Spanish struggle and has informed his people and the world that he has "willed" an insurgent victory. It is not easy for him to withdraw from Spain. But short of a large-scale intervention, which both for internal and external reasons he can hardly afford to launch at this time, victory for Franco remains far off.

For practical reasons, therefore, Mussolini may decide to change his course on the Spanish issue at least to the extent of not opposing mediation and refraining from further intervention. But it may be that his prestige is too deeply involved for a wholehearted retreat. In that case the Spanish struggle will drag on inconclusively for many months more, providing a constant threat to world peace in the process.

The Supreme Court Vacancy.

In urging the President to nominate Felix Frankfurter to the Supreme Court, Senator Norris indirectly calls attention to the fact that the time for filling the vacancy left by the death of Justice Cardozo is drawing near. A similar appreciation of the importance of the forthcoming appointment is found in Senator Burke's indorsement of Judge Bratton, of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Justice Cardozo died on July 9. The Supreme Court does not reconvene until October 3, so that there is still no urgency in the naming of his successor. President Roosevelt is acting wisely in deliberating at length upon the matter. And as the days slip from the calendar it is a subject to which the American people should also be giving their best thought. The primary elections are interesting. But close students of our system of government can reasonably assert that the filling of a Supreme Court vacancy is as vital as all these contests rolled together.

This argument rests upon the unique importance of the judiciary in the American system. In most other countries, and this was true even before the rise of dictatorships, the courts have no powers of restraint against officials. Curbs on administrative tyranny are applied to their underlings by higher officers of the government, or by special tribunals—never by the ordinary courts.

In the English-speaking nations, however, the officer of the law ceases to be such when he acts in excess of his authority. He can be indicted for law-breaking like any other man. Without this provision, as a case in point, there could be no local protest on such issues as the killing of Leroy Keys by the Washington police. That Communists should be active in protesting this very dubious official action is the more interesting because in Communist Russia the killing of a demented civilian by a policeman could be an issue only if the government decided to make it such.

The English legal practice, from which that of this country was derived, permits the individual to use the courts as freely against his government as against his neighbor. Their dual function is to prevent usurpation of power by the government with the same vigilance and determination that they use in enforcing the legal authority of the government upon its citizens. In the United States, however, this doctrine has been carried a step further than is the case in England.

Here, through the existence of the Supreme Court, the judiciary has power not merely to defend the individual against arbitrary official acts but even to check the lawmaking organs of the Government when they overstep the limitations of the Nation's organic law. In England, where there is no written constitution, Parliament is sovereign and only repeal can upset an obnoxious statute. Our Congress has no such unlimited sovereignty. It must operate within the confines of a written Constitution, as interpreted by the courts.

Superficial thinkers have argued that this arrangement limits the sovereignty of the citizen. Actually the opposite is the case. For the supremacy of the Supreme Court, properly interpreted, means that every American, no matter how humble, has continuous opportunity to provide a check not merely to executive but also to legislative tyranny. The check possessed by the individual Englishman stops short at the latter point. But in England court control over the legislature is not as important for the people as with us, since an English government falls and a new Parliament is elected whenever the executive fails to command a majority on a vote of confidence.

The point, however, is not whether the individual citizen is best protected against tyranny under the British or the American system. It is, rather, that the American system simply will not work unless its laws are interpreted by the highest type of men. It is that fact which made President Wilson refer to the courts as "the index of the government's and of the nation's character." It is that fact which made him argue with persuasive logic that one of the most important reasons for electing good men to the Senate is the power of confirmation of judicial appointments possessed by that legislative branch.

Senators Norris and Burke have now expressed their preferences for the new Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Others would do well to follow suit in advising the President and in keeping the matter to the forefront of public consideration. The seat which has been held successively by Justice Holmes and Justice Cardozo will in any event be difficult to fill adequately. The chances for the type of nomination which is essential will be improved by constant emphasis on the fundamental importance of this Presidential duty.

Russian-American Trade.

Renewal for another twelve months of the Russian-American commercial agreement of August 6, 1937, is proof of the mutually satisfactory manner in which that agreement has operated during the past year.

The low point in Russian-American trade was reached in 1932-33. In 1932 American imports from the U. S. S. R. amounted in value to the negligible sum of $9,736,000. The following year the Soviet Union bought from us goods to the value of only $10,674,000. By way of contrast, American imports from Russia during the 1936-37 agreement year amounted to $23,230,000 while Russian imports from the United States attained the sizable figure of $40,513,000. For the agreement year just ended American purchases showed a falling off but Russia increased her purchases here well beyond the guaranteed minimum of $40,000,000.

In the new agreement, as in the old, the United States grants to Russia most-favored-nation treatment except with respect to coal, of which only small quantities of a very hard grade of anthracite not mined in this country are admitted. In all other commodities the Soviet Union will continue to receive the benefit of concessions granted to other countries under the reciprocal trade agreements. At the same time Russia continues its pledge to purchase annually a minimum of $40,000,000 worth of goods from this country.

Since the Soviet government exercises a monopoly over foreign trade, a conventional trade agreement with Russia, of the kind concluded with other nations is out of the question. The smooth manner in which the special Russo-American commercial agreement has thus far operated suggests that differences in economic and political systems are not insuperable barriers to trade if the will to improve commerce is there and if both sides are prepared to make reasonable concessions.

The Unsolved Cotton Problem.

Ever since the Administration undertook to control the output of major crops the weather has been playing tricks on the AAA. For several years drought reduced crops far more drastically than was contemplated by that agency. Now nature seems to be in a bountiful mood at a time when Secretary Wallace is once more struggling against surpluses.

The Federal Crop Reporting Board's estimate that virtually 12,000,000 bales of cotton will be produced this year indicates how far the Administration is from solution of the farm problem. Cotton acreage was drastically cut this year under the AAA's coercive quota system. But a substantial crop is nevertheless in prospect, partly because of favorable weather conditions. Once more it is evident that acreage curtailment does not mean control of output.

In 1934, the average yield of cotton lands in the United States was 165 pounds per acre. Last year virtually the same area produced 267 pounds per acre. With such fluctuations, control methods are obviously uncertain. Moreover, it appears that planters themselves are partly responsible for high acreage yields. When they are required to divert part of their land to other use the best acres are naturally selected for cultivation of their chief crop. And the smaller area is frequently cultivated and fertilized more intensively. It is interesting to note that during the five years just preceding the advent of the AAA the national average yield of cotton was 169 pounds to the acre compared with 205 during the 1933-37 period.

But even if the AAA had a perfect formula for the regulation of cotton production in this country, its policy would still work to the ultimate disadvantage of the farmer. For it will never be able to control foreign cotton output. During the last three years the world has consumed more cotton than in any comparable period. Yet American cotton has been piling up in warehouses because the Government has lent farmers more money per bale than mill owners are willing to pay for it.

Exports of American cotton have fallen from 8,419,000 bales in 1932-33 to an estimated 5,676,000 bales in the marketing year 1937-38, in spite of the world's increased demand. Various markets once supplied by American farmers have been lost to foreign growers. A slight increase in exports of American cotton is indicated for the last year. But the hope of winning back lost markets is far from bright.

Indian and Brazilian producers gained an advantage when crop restriction and price-pegging in this country raised cotton prices out of line with the prices of foreign growths. Brazilian cotton still sells in Liverpool at about 97 per cent of the price of the American product; Indian cotton, at 80 per cent. Although this Indian cotton is not as good as the competing American fiber, its price is sufficiently attractive to hold the gains it has made in recent years. Before American farmers can regain lost markets, this differential will have to be narrowed.

But if cotton prices continue to move downward, Government loans to growers will become mandatory under the last agricultural adjustment act. Cotton prices are again pegged at not less than 8.27 cents. If Secretary Wallace keeps the loans at a minimum, in case loans have to be made, further expansion of foreign production may be discouraged. It is extremely doubtful, however, whether any real progress can be made toward reclaiming foreign markets for cotton so long as the Administration clings to its policy of reducing acreage and holding prices relatively high.

"So-Called Health."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lately have appeared many articles about the need of more so-called "medical care" for the community. One reason why the general health of the more prosperous citizens is not better than it is is because the "medical attention" they so commonly demand is health-ruinous. The more clinics or "health" centers there are, the worse is the general health of a community, and the greater the violation of the simple laws of health. A few doctors have even ventured to suggest that persons "in need" of such treatment ought to be sterilized and thus avoid cursing posterity with their frailties.

Human beings ought to feel ashamed to let millions of dollars be spent for so-called "health" centers such as that about to be built near Bethesda. They should be ashamed to encourage the torture of helpless animals, and hopeless degradation for the human race, while multitudes get sick from lack of sufficient food and shelter. Vaccines, serums, drugs and the weakening of the system through operations, etc., are leading causes of infantile paralysis, sleeping sickness, etc. Your correspondent, "Inquirer," says opposition to the torture of monkeys in connection with the "study" of infantile paralysis is "ridiculous." But all who have any sympathy know that human beings have no right to torture monkeys or other creatures in the "study" of diseases largely created by medical insanity.

Members of the ancient sects of Pythagoreans and Essenians, which favored simplicity of life and vegetarian diet, were famous because of their remarkably good health and longevity. Many of their members lived healthily till they were past 100 years. They proved that health and as much of longevity as could reasonably be desired can be obtained without cruelty to other creatures.

The problem of crime can never be solved by police called upon to defend the legalized cruelties of torture-laboratories, etc. Do away with cruelty and what is called crime will naturally disappear.

Taxi Driver Patrol?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am submitting an idea to help decrease the number of traffic accidents here in the District.

I am a taxi driver here in the District and from my observation we could do a lot to help especially to curb the child fatalities here. My wife and I have children and we know how it would feel to have one crippled or killed.

I am sure the 4,000 taxi drivers here in Washington would do their part to help stamp out the number of traffic accidents. Speaking as one of the 4,000, I am sure this crusade would function as the A. A. A.'s schoolboy patrol does.

First, set up a headquarters where volunteers could register; second, wear an insignia; third, have the full co-operation of the Police Department, Fire Department, auto associations, newspapers and the public.

Vocational Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Board of Education's 1940 budget estimates for 24 new school buildings to cost $4,247,000, and for the purchase of 29 school sites to cost $2,042,000, we wish to indorse the proposed senior high school at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road northeast. In this high school we understand that vocational education will be stressed.

Last school year for the first time showed a falling off of the enrollment in the senior high schools of division 10 to 13. This decrease, we fear, was caused by the discouragement encountered by our graduates of the academic high school courses when, upon graduation, they find practically all the "white collar" positions in the local and Federal Governments barred to them because of discriminations. We hope our youth continues to strive to win the highest scholastic attainments, and then use their abilities and energy to force open avenues of employment.

But in commercial and industrial lines we see opportunities both existing and potential. Very much of the artisan work in the building construction industry financed by private business is performed by our group. The automobile repair and maintenance industry offers great opportunities for employment for those thoroughly qualified.

The technological advancement in the electrical field has opened many new trades for electricians, such as repair and maintenance work on radios, automobiles, refrigerators and television.

There is a great field in small industrial establishments producing wares. Armstrong High School is greatly overcrowded; much of the machinery used in vocational class is 30 years or more old. The class rooms are too small and too few and the number of pupils in each class is too large to permit adequate individual instruction.

More than half of these pupils live in the north and southeast—east of Eighth street northeast—and additional provision for vocational education should be provided in the northeast senior high school at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road.

By giving these youth an education along lines that offer employment will make better citizens and reduce the cost of Federal unemployment relief.

Overworked Nurses

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Why can not the public of Washington be educated to an eight-hour duty for private duty and floor duty nurses?

In this day of enlightenment it does seem unreasonable to ask anyone to work 12 hours per day. Hours have been shortened for workers in all other walks of life, yet the nurse seems to have been forgotten. Why ask a nurse to work the hours you certainly would not work yourself?

Most hospitals in this city have the eight-hour duty, but perhaps one or two are lagging behind. It is up to the layman and some few doctors to help us put the eight-hour duty across.

Nurses are expected to be cheerful at all times, and give excellent nursing care, but how can one expect so much from tired and overworked nurses? Remember that a nurse's time off-duty is not spent out in the open air and sunlight, for she must spend most of it within calling distance of the telephone if she expects to have work.

What strikes the nurses as being very peculiar is that during the regime of the NRA they were eliminated from shorter hours because they were regarded as professional people. Along comes the business tax and they are now in business. Did you know that a nurse has no old age pension, no social security, no compensation for sickness or injuries incurred in line of duty?

Whether you have two 12-hour duty nurses, or three 7-hour duty nurses the cost is just the same to the patient. We are only human after all. We know that patients would receive much better nursing care from a fresh and alert nurse than from a tired, wornout 12-hour duty nurse.

Death Of A Child.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please allow me space to endeavor to correct an impression given out in most of the reports of the accident involving the death of my little granddaughter, Mary Edna Robinson.

The father did not send his children across the street to buy groceries. He had already made his purchases and went around to Twelfth street to get his car, taking with him the smallest child, Janice, leaving the other two in the store. The children stepped outside the door to await their father's return, and he halted on the south side of M street for the purchases to be brought to him by the manager, who had always accompanied the children to the car when it was across the street. As the brother turned to call him that the father had come, little Edna, intent on eating from a package of cakes she carried in her hand, started toward the edge of the sidewalk. Her father called to her, but undoubtedly she failed to hear him, and began walking—not running—across the street, as was proved by the testimony of a gentleman coming in a car from the opposite direction. The space between the cars parked on the north side of the street and the left side of the truck which hit her was 10 feet, according to measurements made by the homicide squad and pictures shown in a local paper.

If there is any irregularity in halting a car in a no-parking area long enough to have curb service in such an instance, those deprived of permits for such cause will leave plenty of room on Washington's streets for the remaining few drivers.

Little Edna lived on a very dangerous street, Seventh street northeast, which so far as I can learn has never had any police inspection as to traffic, and down which buses and trucks ply daily fast enough to destroy the children living on that street.

I would like to ask Maj. Brown if all the mothers on this particular street are to hold their children by the hand continuously, inasmuch as it is unlawful to tether them, and if he or any other parent could possibly at all times know the whereabouts of a lively little child of four years or under.

In my humble opinion, what is needed in relation to the traffic is not speed cops tearing down Rhode Island avenue and Bladensburg road to catch people who exceed the speed limit "as much as a mile," but put more capable, courteous officers in the congested sections, not to act as overbearing tyrants, but to remember that true service on the police force should be as much preventative as prosecutory. There are some wonderful, gracious gentlemen on the Washington police force, but the minor number who act as gruff lords of the road sometimes leave a very bad impression not only on local people, but also on out-of-town guests. But that is another story. A. E. ROBINSON.

"Seek Sincerely."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to Mr. Knott's recent letter on the Church, may I confess: Peccavi nimis cogitatione, verbo et opere. That I have in common with Mr. Knott and every other mortal man. However, Mr. Knott, if sincere, should not lose heart. By seeking constructive politics and leaving destructive criticism to those who have less strength of character, by having a catholic view of things (and by that I mean all-embracing), by working for others, never seeking self nor counting the cost, by sincerely seeking truth wherever it may lead him, he will find an indestructible reward. Let him "Read and be humble in debate. By confession and humility is the Christian soul purged of guilt. Only by truth is the mind of man freed from error. Neither confession nor truth is easy victory. See to it that you strive to conquer in both. The plenitude of the new law is love. The old was fear. You are of the new." ### Honor Is Bright.

MR. BEECHER'S groans and sobs increased as the day wore on. Ordinarily we stayed away from the door where a new case had arrived, but now the presence of death was in us all—who so often, in the afterthroes of liquor had known its sting without its relieving and actual touch. We crowded the door of the sanatorium room where Mr. Beecher lay dying.

I had to stand on tiptoe. The preacher's son had the last good place from which the bed could easily be seen.

"The old man's dying," the lawyer from Richmond said, crowding in closer. I saw Mr. Beecher, just as he began to talk. He was about 70. His bearded face was turned to the ceiling, and his eyes were fixed, as on a mandate dim, but withal revealed. He was dressed in rough farmer's clothing. One suspender had slipped from a shoulder and lay like a coiled snake on the immaculate sheet. His fingers twisted the coils.

"It's too late; it's no use to get it now," he said.

The day physician's face was perspiring. His fingers were clinched on Mr. Beecher's pulse. "I can tell you it's coming," he said. "We just ran out of whisky this morning; it will be here this afternoon. You'll get it when it comes." His eyes stared out the window on the highway that brought all things to the sanatorium.

The psychiatrist, who ruled the sanatorium, appeared in a burst off the elevator and lunged toward Mr. Beecher's room. His monstrous bulk dominated the narrow hall. In his rush, the Phi Beta Kappa key did rumbas on his heaving belly. At the door he paused momentarily, and I saw the rolls of fat on the uplands of the mouth and his two bland eyes—ordinarily mild as sheep and pasturing on the fat—were moved by grief and alarm. We opened a path for him.

Mr. Beecher began again: "I tell you, it's too late now. Y'all've waited too much. Don't get it now. Get somebody to say a prayer, somethin' to help me over. Sing a hymn for me. Oh, God, I've been one sinner. Can't you sing a little somethin'!"

The whisky came in the late afternoon. The day physician rushed to Mr. Beecher's bedside, grabbed him by the scruff of the neck and poured four ounces of poetic rye down his mouth. From the doorway I could see Mr. Beecher's blink, as against a thousand-watt light. The fingers jerked from the coiled suspender. The physician sprang back, like a man who had touched off a dynamite cap. Mr. Beecher jumped from the bed, to rock on his feet. His eyes fixed on unfamiliar objects:

"Where the hell am I at?" he bellowed. And then, "Where'd that little dram come from? I've been used to drinking liquor out a dipper."

The following afternoon Mr. Beecher sought the psychiatrist with a demand to go home. "I got a cock fight coming on the 4th of July. I've told the veterans I'd put it on. I got to go by then," he said.

"My poor soul," the psychiatrist sighed. "You are an honorable man, Mr. Beecher, and your place is here—that is, until you've learned to bring no further pain and despair to your family. You know that you must do your duty, however discommoding."

Later on, Mr. Beecher told me: "I ain't for no mess from that fellow. I've pledged myself to fight them cocks on July 4th."

On the last day of June Mr. Beecher became resolved. He sent his suit to a laundry and borrowed some shoe shining utensils from the head attendant. A barber came out from town and cut his hair. He chose a somber black necktie from my dresser.

We found the psychiatrist on the lawn, whaling down a fellow who had been discharged the week before as cured and who had just been returned under a terrific bun.

"I want to go home," Mr. Beecher blurted out. The psychiatrist whirled.

"You're staying here until you get sweet," he said. "I'm sweet now," Mr. Beecher said humbly, lowering his eyes to the pressed trousers and polished shoes. "That isn't what your family wrote me," the psychiatrist said, knowingly. His face grew with appeal:

"You must realize that there is in this world a still, small thing called honor. This compels you to redeem yourself right here and spare your family further sorrow. It compels me to hold you until you reach that realization.

"That ain't the case," Beecher cried; "I promised the veterans to put on a cock fight. I got to do it that way. I know my duty."

"And my duty is to your family and to you. Your course is equally plain, and I have my own reputation to consider," the psychiatrist said.

That night we passed the hat for Mr. Beecher, and put him on the highway. We told him to stand by the roadside where the car lights would pick him out, and somebody might stop and give him a ride.

Unspiritual Spirits.

GENE TUNNEY'S denunciation of the Distilled Spirits Institute as a thing without social consciousness or soul was a severe shock to those of us who had let ourselves believe that the institute was something really fine. The very word "institute" suggests solidness and unselfish purpose, and then, too, the selection of the late W. Forbes Morgan as the Will Hays of the grog industry seemed to suggest that the institute was conducting itself in accordance with the ethics of the White House. That was reassuring, too.

Mr. Morgan, an uncle of Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, had been treasurer of the Democratic Party, but only the diseased mind of a Liberty Leaguer would toy with the thought that he was chosen for a job paying $100,000 a year for any other reason than his own special fitness. The salary was $65,000, but there also was a fund of $35,000 a year, similar to the President's own travel allowance, of which he was not required to give a minute account.

Had he used his thumb on his official travels in the interests of the spiritual side of the whiskey trade, or had he driven his own car like those Congressmen who collect 20 cents a mile for travel which costs them a tenth of that, the savings would have been his.

• • • •

THE FACT that the whiskey industry owed its very life to the head of the party for whose triumphs Mrs. Roosevelt's uncle had toiled had nothing to do with his selection for a $100,000 job as head lobbyist for the industry, and if those low individuals in the audience who just pursed their lips and blew a vulgar note repeat the offense they will be thrown out.

We will have decorum here and a proper respect for the crown.

MR. MORGAN died before he could do much to quicken the social consciousness and kindle the soul of the whiskey trade, but it can never be said of the Distilled Spirits Institute that it failed to discern special fitness. For, in time, the institute looked about for a man to serve the same high ideals in the publicity line and with the same true instinct selected Mr. Norman Baxter, who had worked on a New Deal campaign paper in the State of Maine in the election of 1936. The journal carried a message to the bleak and dour Yankees, but, although your average citizen of Maine can hear a dollar bill drop on a feather bed on the other side of an oak door, they were deaf to Mr. Baxter's call. The whiskey trade was more responsive, however, and Mr. Baxter now draws $20,000 a year, a fact which surely will arouse no ill-will against the trade in the higher councils of the Democratic Party. It bespeaks a nobility which the party will not miss if Mr. Tunney does.

And even if it be granted that there were other reasons why the whiskey trade created a $100,000-a-year job for an uncle of Mrs. Roosevelt and a $20,000-a-year job for another loyal worker, surely Mr. Tunney were lacking in one of the finest qualities in the soul of humankind to object to that. If Mr. Tunney has no appreciation of gratitude, then perhaps it is well that he and his own whiskey firm, the American Distilling Co., withdraw from the institute and go their wolfish way alone. Gratitude is expensive, but a beautiful thing.

Mr. Tunney not will be the object of all eyes as he undertakes for the whiskey trade the same mission that he attempted on behalf of Chicago in the celebrated civic uplift spectacle with Jack Dempsey on the Lake front. That endeavor, it may be remembered, was intended to make Chicago a better place to live in, and although the benefits are not yet apparent maybe it just takes time.

• • • •

BUT IF a socially conscious man with a spiritual mission in the hootch trade will permit a suggestion from one who has suffered occasionally it will be a simple plea that he join Charles Lindbergh on his island and devote his life to the removal of the hangover ingredient. If Mr. Tunney has ever known that dreadful woe he should need no urging. If he hasn't, then what right has he to mess with the ornery soul of whiskey?

War In China

Conflict Japanese Thought Would Be Over In Three Months Now In Second Year And Apparently No Nearer End.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Shanghai.

WITH A THIRD of China laid waste, with well over a million combatants dead and injured, with the economic structures of the two warring nations strained to a dangerous point, the Sino-Japanese war seems to be no nearer end than it was a year ago.

When Tokyo decided on July 11, 1937, to transform a minor incident into a major holocaust, it did not expect the war to last longer than three months. The Japanese general staff believed, and hoped, that as soon as its legions pour into North China, the Nanking government will realize the futility of resistance and will accept Tokyo's draconic demands for economic cooperation and joint opposition to communism.

Japan was desperately anxious to localize the war to North China, where the poorly trained and armed rabble of a few provincial warlords would enable her infantry, air force and mechanized units to demonstrate to the world at large and to the Nanking government Dai-Nippon's military might.

The army's plans were messed up by the Japanese navy and the Chinese government. The navy—overjealous of the army and anxious to show its worth to the Japanese taxpayer—allowed itself to be baited by the Chinese into a battle in Shanghai. After a week of apparently deliberate delay, the army reluctantly came to the navy's succor, dispatching here a force of about 150,000 men to fight Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's picked troops.

Realizing that the temper of the people would not permit any further concessions to the Japanese, the Nanking government declined late in July to pick up the Japanese gauntlet. Cannily, the Chinese general staff chose to make Shanghai and not North China the major battlefield.

The Chinese decision was sound. The government's best troops were already in this area. Routes of communication and transportation were conveniently short. With their vast interests endangered by war, foreign powers could have been expected to intervene in the dispute on the side of China. And, finally, the opening of hostilities in central China would have at once extended the front, and thus increased the strain on Japan's coffers, military supplies and manpower.

Chinese Heroism Astonishes World.

HOSTILITIES in Shanghai began on August 13. In the next three months the Chinese soldier amazed the world by his courage, capacity to absorb punishment and his indifference to pain and privation. The casualties on both sides were frightful, the Chinese probably losing about 300,000 men and their foes about a fifth of that number.

The Chinese lines cracked late in October, but it was not until a successful Japanese flanking movement from the Hangchow Bay early in November, that a general retreat began. It did not stop at the strongly fortified "Hindenburg Line," about 35 miles west of here. It continued after the fall and rapine of Nanking on December 12—the day the U. S. S. Panay was sunk by Japanese bombs.

Nanking was not a glorious victory for the Japanese. It was a costly error. After its plans to localize the conflict in North China miscarried, Tokyo became obsessed with the idea that the Chinese would sue for peace with the fall of their capital.

Therefore when Japanese units entered Nanking, a halt was called to troop movements, while Tokyo patiently awaited the Chinese government's penitent appeal for forgiveness. But the Chinese made no peace move. Instead, they utilized the respite to reorganize their badly battered and demoralized armies along a new line of defense.

Tokyo awoke to its blunder in mid-January, issuing on January 16 its famous statement in which the cessation of relations with the Chinese government was formally announced. Spokesmen in Tokyo were, however, careful to emphasize that this meant neither the termination of diplomatic intercourse nor a declaration of war.

Early in February, Japanese troops launched a new general offensive in North China, cutting through the northern troops with the ease of a knife going through butter. The Yellow River was crossed in Shantung. Suiyuan Province was taken and an "independent" Inner Mongolian government organized. Shansi Province was occupied in about three weeks.

It was in the course of this drive that the Japanese awoke to the menace of guerrilla warfare. With her inadequate forces, Japan could do no better than occupy and hold major cities and railways linking them. Roving units of defeated troops, specially trained Communist guerrillas and armed peasants held their sway over smaller towns and the areas between railways.

Late in March, the Japanese tide, consisting of about four divisions of 80,000 men, had rolled to the upper half of the Yellow River, where it forms Shansi's boundary with Honan and Shensi, and to the strongly fortified line of Chinese defenses in southern Shantung.

Japanese Disaster At Taierchwang.

IT WAS in the latter place that the Japanese tasted their first serious defeat of the war. In this protracted and sanguinary engagement—known to the world as the Battle of Taierchwang—the Chinese allowed two divisions (one of them commanded by Gen. S. Itagaki, the new war minister), to drive deep into the fortified area and then by a series of rapid thrusts completely enveloped the units. Cut off from their supplies and reinforcements, the divisions were all but annihilated, their losses being reliably estimated at 7,000 dead and 21,000 wounded.

The setback was severe. It gave an immeasurable boost to the Chinese morale and caused uneasiness in Japan, although no news of the defeat was published there. Gen. Sugiyama, the then war minister, flew to the front to see what could be done. Troops were immediately withdrawn from Shansi and central China and thrown into an attack upon Hsuchow.

With the aid of motorized units and tanks, the Japanese succeeded in cutting the Lunghai Railway (May 12) and reducing Hsuchow (May 20). The Japanese hopes of completely encircling and annihilating 200,000 Chinese troops massed in the area, however, did not materialize, for the Chinese had slipped out of the ring.

As this is written the Japanese have scored important gains, but their expectations of a quick occupation of Hankow have been given a cold shower by the Yellow River flood. Now they must take the circuitous route Hankow-ward, over rugged mountains, with the resultant heavier loss of life and material costs.

Chinese Losses Incalculable.

ON THE other hand, despite the strain placed by the war on Japan's economic structure, no neutral observer in the Orient expects Nippon's economic collapse because of the hostilities. If necessary, Tokyo can continue its armed adventure for two or three years before a major economic crisis will arise.

The 'Yes, But' Men

By Ernest Lindley.

Pro-Roosevelt In Everything But Votes.

ON THE STAGE of political theory, the Nation has been treated to some remarkable quick-change acts by the opponents of Mr. Roosevelt during the last few years. It is worth recalling that the demand that extraordinary powers be delegated to the President began and reached its highest peak among financiers and industrialists in the winter and spring of 1932-33. This demand arose from the desire for economies and a balanced budget, but it spread. In the spring of 1933 pressure from some of the leaders of American industry converted a wage and hour bill into the undefined delegation of power in the national industrial recovery act and so stampeded Mr. Roosevelt into probably the worst error of his first Administration.

Two years later some of those who had supported the NIRA most enthusiastically at the outset were applauding the Supreme Court for knocking it out. During the next two years, if you had listened to Mr. Roosevelt's opponents, you would have thought that every decision of the Supreme Court embodied the unchallengeable determination of immutable principle. But since the 1936 election, the Supreme Court has been overturning its own precedents, and the liberal control of the Court, which Mr. Roosevelt sought through his 1937 judicial reform bill, has been established.

In 1936 you would have expected the Republicans to congratulate Mr. Roosevelt on bringing the Democratic Party to the support of a long-established Republican principle: a strong national government. Instead, the Republicans dwelt on States' rights and proposed, as an alternative to national action, interstate compacts—a device of such limited usefulness that several leaders of the Republican national campaign grinned sheepishly when they talked about it privately.

• • • •

AT TIMES during the last few years, Mr. Roosevelt's opponents have advanced the theory that it is improper for the Chief Executive to attempt to assert leadership over Congress. That theory disregards not only the theory and practice of the party system but a duty expressly imposed on the President by the Constitution: To recommend to Congress "such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient."

At present some of Mr. Roosevelt's critics are blossoming out with defenses of what he has described as the "yes, but" men and criticizing as alien to the Democratic tradition his efforts to defeat some of them in the primaries. If there is anyone in or around the New Deal who thinks the President has always been right, he has escaped the attention of this correspondent. Early in his Administration, Mr. Roosevelt said that he expected to make mistakes and in retrospect he has admitted that he has made a few. In his radio speech of June 24, he said specifically that he would not indicate a preference in a State primary "merely because a candidate, otherwise liberal in outlook, has conscientiously differed with me on any single issue."

The "yes, but" men, as defined by Mr. Roosevelt in the same speech, are not those who have differed with him on a few specific issues or who have openly opposed him. They are the men who have said "yes to a progressive objective, but who always find some reason to oppose any specific proposal to gain that objective."

• • • •

POLITICIANS of that type have been plentiful in the Democratic party during the last few years. They have been warm supporters of Mr. Roosevelt and of the Democratic platform until elected, but then have found various pretexts for ignoring their commitments. Conditions change, unexpected situations arise. No reasonable person expects a candidate for any office to foresee every problem and to describe in advance how he proposed to deal with it. Mr. Roosevelt himself sprang his Supreme Court plan without prior notice to the country or his party. At the time, he and some of his lieutenants were bitter about the opposition to that plan from some of the Senators and Congressmen who had ridden into office on his coat-tails. Yet today, few, if any of them, regard the Supreme Court bill as the acid test of adherence to the New Deal and progressive principles.

But, on the whole, Mr. Roosevelt has been frank with the electorate, not only about his objectives, but about the methods by which he proposes to reach them. There were inconsistencies in the Democratic platform of 1932, as there are in all platforms, but nobody who knew Mr. Roosevelt's record or who read and believed his speeches during the 1932 campaign had much occasion to be surprised by what he did during the next four years. In 1934 he threw his social security program—which departed in some respects from the 1932 platform—into the Congressional campaign as an issue. In 1936, both the platform and Mr. Roosevelt's speeches were specific—again excepting the Supreme Court plan.

If the voters wish, they may elect a candidate who says, in effect, "I won't promise anything except to exercise my best judgment." Sometimes they do. But it is customary for a candidate to give and for the voters to demand either a few specific pledges or some general indication of his political philosophy.

• • • •

JUDGING from what they say, a great many candidates think they can win votes by lauding Mr. Roosevelt and his general objectives. In many instances this amounts to fraud on the voters. The "yes, but" men are those who are for Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal until it comes to voting for specific measures to carry out the pledges in the party platform and Mr. Roosevelt's speeches. It is hardly conceivable that the outright opponents of Mr. Roosevelt, any more than his supporters, would defend the practice of getting elected under false pretenses.

That Ugly 'It.'

WILLIAM VAN TIL is a fine, strapping, jolly - looking Long Islander in his upper twenties, who teaches social studies at Ohio State University. His wife, Bee, looks pretty, both in the face and in the halter and shorts she wears when they go holidaying together in their 57-pound kayak, or faltboot, the Long Island Duck II. Just Duck for short. They both speak French and German, and Bee also knows Czech, the native tongue of her parents.

For them, therefore, a 37-day trip down the Danube, from Ulm to Belgrade, offered no language barriers when the natives sought their willing ears in which to blow off steam for or against Hitler, for or against the late and not universally lamented Austrian government, for or against Horthy and the Trianon Treaty, for or against the hundreds of racial, linguistic and political monstrosities that keep the Balkan peoples in a perpetual stew. Having enjoyed kayaking in Central Europe in 1936, William and Bee went back last year for a longer trip.

Mr. Van Til's report and comment on what they did, saw, heard and learned during their outing is called "The Danube Flows Through Fascism; 900 Miles in a Fold Boat" (Scribner's, $3.) In the welter of nationalistic rivalries and hatreds they appraised the Danube as "the only international thing left in central Europe." With so many frontiers, new and old, they found the customs officers almost as much of a plague as the green-headed flies that made a running fight of the summer afternoons in the hot flatlands. But, being Americans and "sportsmen," the customs let them off lightly—and politely—compared to the treatment meted out to closer neighbors.

"It is in the little things, the ordinary contacts of every-day life, rather than in the supposedly big demarches and detentes in the chancelleries and foreign offices, that one gets at the tragedy that is modern Europe. The Van Tils got at hundreds of these little things, and report upon them illuminatingly. They talked with Germans, Austrians, Hungarians, Czechs, Yugoslavs, and even a stray Englishman. Mostly they listened, and seldom argued anybody's point, because, as they agreed, "you can't make converts at a lynching or in the violent ward at Bellevue, and both comparisons are apropos to Europe today."

• • • •

EVERYWHERE they found the little men of Europe were saying "When it comes, we hope it doesn't come through here." "We here are hoping that it will go through Czechoslovakia," said the canoe station operator at Ottensheim. And when they sat with Bee's aunts and uncles around a great bowl of potatoes in the little town of Kocelovice, below Prague, one of the uncles, well over 70, said: "It will come through here. All we want is peace and the farm—and they will send it through here." And William and Bee began thinking of the German lads on the Meselle who told them with a smile that "in Alsace the peasants let their houses fall to ruin, for they know that it will be sent through there." Everywhere it seemed to be a case of "Dear God, dear Hitler, dear Stalin, dear somebody or something, don't send it through our valley; save us some sticks of the house and some springs of the bed."

"Always," Mr. Van Til recalls, "that ugly 'it' that an anonymous 'they' would send through somewhere! And always the cannon fodder prattling toward self-destruction with boasts of German culture or Austrian hegemony or Czech spirit or Hungarian intellectuality! In Vienna I asked an intelligent internationalist what he thought the possibilities were for a cessation of European fratricide.

"'The first solution,' he said, 'is that people become reasonable. I am sufficient of a pessimist and professor to think this solution impossible. The other solution is terror. By that I mean one group becoming dominant and overpowering and suppressing all others. That is the way England solved the Boer and Irish questions. That is how America settled the Indian and Negro problems. That is how Europe will settle forever—for 50 years at least, and that is an infinity in terms of politics—the nationalist disease.'"

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

U. F. W. A. Policy.

The United Federal Workers of America has drafted its policy on the executive orders of June 24, and while the lengthy statement sets forth the attitudes of personnel management long held by the organization, the members have been urged to give it careful consideration and such crititicism as they think is warranted. The policy statement, interesting to all Federal workers who ponder their destiny under the orders, contains such passages as:

"A good public personnel policy concerning the filling of a specific vacany, involves consideration of a number of factors and conditions relating to employment; most important, these are the conditions of promotion, transfer, dismissal due to reduction of force and the consideration of service ratings and seniority. The views of the U. F. W. A. as to these conditions and considerations may be summarized as follows:

"(1) When a vacancy exists it should be filled first from any persons available who have been dismissed from the agency itself due to reduction of force. (2) Next from a register of persons who have been dismissed from other agencies due to reduction of force. (3) From persons within the agency eligible to promotion. (4) From persons who have been working for the Government and (a) who are now employed in another agency and are eligible for promotion to this position; (b) who are employed in another agency and desire a transfer to this position, and (c) who are employed in another agency and need a transfer for purposes of adjustment. (5) From a register of persons who have left the Government service, but are eligible to re-enter under the civil service rules. (6) from the general citizenship through open competitive examination. . . ."

The policy statement covers such phases of employe relationship as promotions, reemployment, the open register, seniority, transfers, in-service training, adjustment, agreements and appeals, service ratings, etc. More and more Federal authorities are following the constructive advice from the employe unions—and at this juncture, when the executive orders are wide open to all manner of interpretation and much or little could be gained from them, it would seem that the employes generally should take the most alive interest in all statements of policy from responsible groups and should aid these groups in discussion and perfection of those policies.

Notes.

Agent 2-R comes in to say that the apportionment rules don't apply to those who will come into the Classified Civil Service under Executive Orders; he also says that the more he reads the Executive Orders the more convinced he becomes that their whole import is in favor of the administrative heads as against the employes . . . Friday on the Norfolk and Washington Line, will arrive in Norfolk the following morning and divide Saturday and Sunday between "The Lost Colony" performance at Roanoke Island and at the seashore at Nags Head Beach. The club has bunched reservations of its members to take advantage of low rates for the cruise, and also has a limited number of reservations which are available to employes of other Government departments. Mrs. Lucille McMurray, at the FCA. is in charge of reservations. The Roanoke pageant, celebrating the 351st anniversary of Sir Walter Raleigh's lost colony, will be presented Saturday night.

Word comes that Mrs. Katherine Fenton, of the Veterans' Administration, won two trophies in the Asbury Park Bridge Tournament, just ended—one runner up, one straight win in the open pairs.

Socialist Opposes Gov. La Follette in Wisconsin Primary

Madison, Wis., Aug. 9 (AP).—Contest for the Progressive nomination for Governor was assured today when Glenn P. Turner, Madison, Socialist and member of the Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation, filed nomination papers to oppose Gov. Philip F. La Follette, who seeks a fourth term.

Although Turner is a Socialist he will be entered on the Progressive ticket in the primary, as the Socialists will not enter a State slate. Turner several times has been an unsuccessful candidate for the State Supreme Court.

The Governor's petitions also were filed today, the deadline for qualifying for the September 20 primary.

Senator F. Ryan Duffy, Fond Du Lac, is unopposed for the Democratic nomination, but at least five Republicans will contest for their party's nomination. Three Progressives are expected to make the race.

Modification of the minimum rate order, which became effective February 12, was asked to allow lower schedules on about 35 commodities on shipments between Washington and New York.

L. J. Zinser, of Baltimore, chief of the joint rate commodity of the Middle Atlantic States Motor Carriers Conference, was the principal witness for the carriers.

Farley Warns Party Can't Win On Spoils Only

a political party knit together," he wrote. "With time, patience and hard work I could construct a major political party in the United States without holding out a single job to deserving partisans."

Any suggestion that Farley maintains third party ideas or subscribes to them is blasted in another paragraph in which he says, "We don't want three major parties in this country, and certainly we don't want any more than that." In this same section he took potshots at the 1936 "grass root" convention in the deep South which allegedly was financed by "Jeffersonian," or anti-New Deal Democrats. He also may have been firing at the La Follette brothers, Robert and Philip, who have organized their own third party in Wisconsin.

"If party government, and especially the two-party system, should crumble in this country, which seems very unlikely, then the United States would be at the mercy of every organized minority, every ambitious demagogue, every radio spellbinder and every political crackpot who should come along," he wrote.

"President Loves Fight."

He attributed his own magic touch in politics to contacts, both in person and by mail, and to a studiously observed determination to remain cool under trying circumstances. On the other hand, he wrote, "a fact which few people realize about President Roosevelt is that he dearly loves to fight.

"Indeed," he continued, "this battling nature of his is the key in many respects to his whole character. I am frank to confess that there have been times when I felt that the President, from sheer joy of fight, battled too hard, when a compromising attitude might have accomplished more than a direct line drive."

He recalled the time when he was criticized by the press for reporting the Postoffice Department was "out of the red," whereas it actually had a deficit due to ocean mail and other subsidies. The President wanted to fight back, he said, and he couldn't dissuade him.

"This little understood combative streak," Farley continued, "explains why he seems constantly engaged in thunderous war against those he believes opposed to his efforts to humanize the Government."

Cites Ickes-West Feud.

The President's only "weak spot," he writes, is that he hates to fire a man or woman he knows, even when the provocation is severe. To substantiate this he cites the now famous feud between Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Mr. Roosevelt's former Congressional liaison officer, erstwhile Undersecretary Charles West, and the imbroglio between Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and George N. Peek over farm policies.

Ickes moved West's furniture and personal belongings out of the Interior Building, but Mr. Roosevelt refused to have West fired. The Wallace-Peek set-to was eased when Peek was transferred to the Export-Import Bank.

Farley laughed off assertions that the President's original brain trust, namely, Raymond Moley, Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Lewis W. Douglas and others were the power behind the White House. They were no more than research engineers whose knowledge of economic factors were used by Mr. Roosevelt, he said. They achieved wide publicity, he declared, mainly because a fast-thinking newspapermen tagged them with the name "brain trusters."

Moley was the only member of the official family who virtually was forced out of the Government, he said. Morley left because of a break between himself and Secretary of State Hull and other high officials while Moley was in the State Department.

Although the original brain trust has disapeared from the Federal scene, there is still a brain trust, if it can be called that, he said. This time, however, he explained, the brain trusters are men who have no desire for the political or public spotlight, and who subscribe to and are working for the President's objectives. In his summation, Farley points out that not a single man has resigned from the Cabinet and the vacancies which occurred were bacuse of death.

Farley revealed that one of the most critical problems posed to the President was that of the late Senator Huey P. Long, swashbuckling Louisiana Democrat. He said the Administration at first was not inclined to take Long seriously but that Huey made himself so obnoxious he could no longer be ignored.

He told how Long stormed to the White House to demand unstinted patronage, kept his hat on most of the time he was talking to the President, and left, commenting to Farley:

"What the hell's the use of coming down to see this fellow? I can't win any decision over him."

Other observations by Farley:

The troubles of former Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of the Tennessee Valley Authority were due to his failure to collaborate with Senators and Congressmen on TVA appointees.

Feared Tammany Bolt.

Democratic chieftains expected a party break when Mr. Roosevelt was first nominated over protests of Tammany Hall which had gone down the line for Al Smith.

The President, when Governor of New York, fully intended to oust former Mayor James J. Walker of New York if Walker were adjudged guilty of charges then pending. Walker resigned.

Mr. Roosevelt made a big political gamble when he decided on a cross-country stumping campaign, instead of a so-called front-porch campaign.

The President refused the cooperation of retiring President Herbert Hoover because Hoover was too indecisive, Mr. Roosevelt, Farley said, wanted quick action, especially in the 1933 banking emergency.

Mr. Roosevelt is a leader with a proper sense of political timing.

The top av the' morning' (also afternoon and evening) to ye, Mr. Corrigan! Sure and there'll be Corrigan celebrations in all the Washington spots tonight, even though our hero, worn by official festivities, drops flat in his hotel bed.

High Corrigan shenanigans will reign all day in Hi-Hat, where Oscar announces an official "Corrigan Day" and three (don't count 'em) specially concocted drinks. There'll be the "Corrigan Collins" (trimmed with green and we would not dare mention the proof), the "Corrigan Cocktail," of rum, vermouth and green mint; the Corrigan Cooler," made with Irish whisky. Hi-Hat's Swingsters will probably play and sing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and "My Wild Irish Rose" until their hands and throats are blistered.

At the Mayfair, Promotion Manager Jimmy Byrd also has figured out a "Corrigan Cocktail," with mainstays of green mint and Irish whisky. "That should satisfy even the Irish," says Jimmy to us. "Satisfy is no name for it. It will delight their contrary souls," says we to Jimmy.

Final word lay with Host Victor Sampson, of the Anchor Room. "We're going to make up a special flock of cocktails for Corrigan," he said, "and I hope our Irish bartender doesn't send them to New York instead of his hotel."

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 9.—Eyes that for 80 years served their original owner today brought partial sight to a middle-aged man and a youth, and the surgeon said complete vision might be theirs.

The eyes were those of Mrs. Margaret Carr, who died at Berkeley at the age of 80 July 31, murmuring, "This is Heaven—how beautiful!"

Three days later the corneas were transplanted to sightless eyes of the Rev. U. E. Harding, Portland, Oreg., Nazarene minister, who had been blind 43 years, and Arthur Morton, Sacramento pianist.

Today the surgeon, who would not permit use of his name, entered Harding's room and removed the bandages.

"I can see!" the minister cried. "I can see your fingers and count them! I can see colors." He trembled and wept for joy.

The surgeon strode to Morton's room and uncovered the eyes that had been slightless since 1932. Morton gazed up at the doctor.

"Things are blurred—reddish," he whispered. "But I can see!" Then he fainted.

The surgeon said that of seven transplantations he had performed these two alone could be termed successful.

The two men will remain in the hospital for at least another week.

Sheriff Not Keen On Job of Lashing Montgomery Man

Sheriff G. Edington Bell, of Montgomery County, isn't so keen on the job of lashing Brown C. Turner, 42-year-old wife-beater, given him by Judge Harold C. Smith, of county police court.

The sheriff announced yesterday that he intends having a physical examination made of Turner to learn if the prisoner is able to undergo the ten lashes ordered by the court. Turner was given permission to get a lawyer yesterday with ten days in which to file an appeal from the sentence.

Sheriff Bell said his office never has possessed the traditional cat-o-nine-tails, though a prisoner was whipped in the county as recently as 1925. He said the whipping sentence would be carried out as soon as the physical examination is made

4 Colored Boys Flee Md. School

Four boys escaped yesterday from the Maryland State School for Colored Boys at Cheltenham. They were William Black, 14; Clarence Fortson, 17; Luther Davis, 18, all of Baltimore, and James Tesbury, 19, of Elkton.

On Monday, Andrew Beckwith, a cottage master at the school, was suspended after charges were filed against him, alleging that he had beaten one of the inmates with a padlock. Beckwith's action was termed "sadistic and brutal," in a port of Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones. Benjamin B. Sunderland, superintendent of the school, said the charges were untrue.

St. Louis Woman Is Seeking Parole In 'Baby Fraud'

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Parole Board will determine next week whether Mrs. Helen Berroyer, convicted in the St. Louis "baby fraud" case in 1936, should be granted a parole.

T. Webber Wilson, one of three board members, heard Mrs. Berroyer plead for her freedom at the Federal Reformatory, Alderson, W. Va., last week, it was learned.

Mrs. Berroyer was one of four persons convicted of using the mails to obtain money from Dr. Marsh Pitzman, a St. Louis physician, using an adopted baby under the pretense the child had been born to Nellie T. Muench, a friend of the physician.

St. Louis Editor Backs Group Health Systems

Medical Association Is Held Confused on Principle of Co-operatives.

Opposition of organized medicine to health co-operatives is comparable to use of the lockout by reactionary employers, the Rev. G. A. McDonald, S. J., St. Louis editor, declared yesterday as a preliminary to addressing a section of the Catholic Action Summer School on co-operatives at the Washington Hotel at 2:30 today.

Likening the American Medical Association to an organization of capitalists, Father McDonald asserted that the public ought to unite in group health associations in the same way that workers have combined into unions.

"Thurman Arnold is quite right in threatening to prosecute organized medicine for restraining trade," said Father McDonald, who is associate editor of "The Queen's Work." "The doctors are doing just what capitalists have sometimes done."

At least half the physicians in America would approve group health asspociations if they fully understood the principle behind them, said Father McDonald. "The A. M. A. is confused," he declared. "It thinks it is fighting socialized medicine when it fights co-operative medicine, but the two are entirely different."

"Group health associations or co-operative medicine will take care of the medical problem in this country without socialism, without letting the Government do it. Co-operation is good for both the people and the doctors," he said.

"Not only does it make medical care available to thousands who need it and as individuals can't afford it, but it also assures steady income to doctors and employment to many physicians who are now starving through lack of work."

Guthrie Named Deputy Counsel Of Air Bureau

Noble of Civil Aeronautics Commission Also Appoints Frizzell.

Charles S. Guthrie, assistant general counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission, has been appointed general counsel of the Civil Aeronautics Commission, and Paul J. Frizzell, deputy general manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, has been named secretary, Chairman Edward J. Noble, of the new Federal agency, announced yesterday.

An honor graduate of Harvard law school, Guthrie has had wide experience in private and governmental legal work. After serving his apprenticeship with a prominent New York law firm, he organized the partnership of Holter, Ingalls & Guthrie, of New York City. Subsequently, he was connected with the Niles-Bemont-Pond Co., manufacturer of machine tools.

Guthrie also had a year's experience analyzing sales problems for Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., and then spent 12 months as vice president of the Morris Plan Banking Corporation of America.

In 1932 he was named head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation division charged with legal work involving self-liquidating loans to industries and municipalities. After the conclusion of that program he returned to private practice here. He was appointed assistant general counsel of the SEC in 1935.

Frizzell, a native of Washington, was attending George Washington University when his studies were interrupted by the entrance of the United States into the World War. He immediately entered naval aviation, and after receiving instruction at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and at Pensacola, Fla., he was made an ensign in 1919.

Returning to Washington, Frizzell entered the real estate business with the firm of Shannon & Luchs, of which he later became vice president and general manager.

In 1933 he was appointed assistant manager of the local office of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the following year was named assistant general manager.

Four of those selected will be rewarded with an aeroplane trip to and from Richmond on Saturday via the Eastern Airlines.

In the contest tomorrow night at the Airport Pool, the entrants will be judged in evening clothes as well as in bathing suits. Talent will play an important part in the judging. # TVA Inquirers Study Berry's Marble Leases

Properties Cost Senator $1 Each, Congressional Committee Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 9.—Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, and his associates paid $1 each for most of their 241 mineral and marble leases in the Norris Dam area—later valued at $5,000,000—a witness told a Congressional investigation committee today.

Evans Dunn, assistant TVA general counsel, who directed last winter the authority's successful suit to condemn the Berry holdings, was the first witness as the committee delved into the celebrated "Berry marble case."

He testified that in January, 1933, the authority received a letter from Fred Manley, Knoxville engineer, representing the Berry interests, asking the authority to "look into" the matter.

Morgan Charges Fraud.

Among the spectators were Leslie Morris, of Frankfort, Ky., counsel for Berry and his associates, and Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, deposed TVA chairman, who has charged there was "intent to defraud the government" in the Berry case.

While Berry and his associates made no formal claim against the Government for damages to their holdings in the flooded dam reservoir, Dr. Morgan testified TVA Directors David E. Lilienthal and Harcourt A. Morgan agreed to conciliate informal claims.

He said TVA experts had reported the marble holdings were worthless, and that he blocked the conciliation move.

Leases Held Worthless.

Berry accused the Authority of "robbing" him, and denied there was any deception or fraud in the case.

A Federal commission ruled the leases were commercially worthless, and awarded no damages.

The committee agreed today to postpone further cross-examination of Dr. Harry A. Curtis, chief TVA chemical engineer, who negotiated a phosphate purchase which netted a private concern a profit of $530,000.

Kennedy-Warren Staff Drops One-Day Strike

Three dozen service employes of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments who went on strike Monday were back at work yesterday, while representatives of the Building Service Employes' Union, Local 82, and officials of the B. F. Saul Co. attempted to iron out their troubles. The employes struck and picketed the building, they said, because of "unfair labor practices" on the company's part.

Picketing ended when the union members returned to their posts. The union charged two service employes were discharged because of union activities.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"I Do Not Ask the Solution of My Problem, But Only How to Bear It," Writes Unhappy Wife.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH. My request is a bit unusual in that I am not asking you for a solution to my problem, but only how to bear it. We have been married for several years and our first child was born at the end of the first year of marriage. There is something in my husband that has always made him cause a great deal of unhappiness to those near him, and yet to feel that he is doing it in self-defense when he is not in the least justified. He has done this to his parents and also to me.

It is impossible to reason with him. We have always had a terrific struggle financially and I had always thought that when and if that problem was solved, our troubles would disappear also. Although we are still struggling, there have been short periods when he had more money, but he was very unfair about it. We have always quarreled a great deal but I was always sure of his love. A wife can tell. However, it has been different now for many months and, in addition, he has been even more unjust and unreasonable than usual.

• • • •

I would be justified in leaving him and he has made me feel that he would not care, and even wishes that I would. Our present circumstances and certain other considerations make it impossible for me to leave, as it would be disastrous for all concerned. While I am very unhappy, I see that it is extremely inadvisable for us to separate at present. In the meantime, it is advisable that I should be calm and that I should conduct our home life in a natural and usual manner. This I find very hard to do, since I am not in a position to have outside interests and have little opportunity for finding a position. I find myself thinking things which I know are not good for me, and yet I can hardly stop myself.

• • • •

It is hard for me to analyze my feeling for my husband. He has hurt me very deeply and because of that I don't think well of him. Yet I admire some of his capabilities. I was too young and innocent when I married him, and knew no other love. When I think of someone else occupying his place in my life, it seems unnatural. In other words, in spite of everything, he seems part of me. The problem remains—how can I have peace of mind under present circumstances? Please don't send me to a psychologist, as I could not afford it; nor would I like to go to a clinic. Thank you very much, and I wish you continued success.

WEARY.

DEAR WEARY: The answer to your simple, noble request—i. e., how to bear your problem with peace of mind—lies in the realm of the spirit, in the realm of Holy Spirit. Perhaps you are like most of us who make up this present generation of inhabitants of the so-called Christian world. You were reared in a so-called Christian home, against the background of one or another orthodox form of faith. But perhaps your professions of faith were mechanical, and your petitions routine and glib, uttered from the surface of your mind. And perhaps as the years slipped by and you grew to maturity, you absent-mindedly dismissed or perhaps forthrightly rejected the whole so-called "business of religion" as child's nonsense, or, as someone has cynically said, "the opiate of the masses."

• • • •

But have you ever, in times of sorest mental and spiritual stress in your grown-up experience, had the inspired idea to turn with a child's faith and a child's trust, to the Gospels for comfort and enlightenment? Perhaps not. I believe if you had, you would long since have found there the richest answer to your quest—couched in the most poignantly convincing and beautifully comforting language. I am something of a newcomer to this field of research myself, but what I have already found there—with a thrilling sense of original discovery—is a spiritual wealth beyond all worldly calculating. I have turned to its pages weary and fretted and have laid aside the book after an hour or less with spirit invigorated and outlook refreshed.

There are glorious passages in the Gospel according to Matthew, and yet others in the Gospel according to John that supply a staff to my hands, firm ground for my feet and wings to my spirit. There are those passages in Matthew which recite Christ's instruction in prayer, as: "For your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him. After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father who art in heaven, etc." And there are those miraculously tender passages in John (whose Gospel has been called "the Gospel of love") which gives testimony of "the Comforter, even the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in (Jesus) name . . ."

• • • •

After having first read, for myself, the Gospel according to John, I had an impulse to devote my next column to telling all those who were weary and heavy-laden where a message of greatest refreshment and consolation might be found. However, I contended myself with mentioning the discovery, somewhat hesitantly, to a select few intelligent, understanding friends whom I happened to meet on subsequent days. They were unastonished. "The most beautiful of all the Gospels," they told me. And from the lips of a judge on one day, and clergyman the next, I learned that it is known as "The Gospel of Love."

• • • •

Therefore, if you would achieve mental peace and spiritual tranquillity in the midst of temporal stress and strain, turn to the Gospels, where the enduring values of life are immortalized in language of such majestic and moving simplicity that the very cadence of the prose has power to soothe.

Fall Dresses Show Graceful Lines

THE BLACK matelasse crepe dress above illustrates several of the new season's trends—the straight silhouette, graceful draped shoulders and the Midas touch in the gold necklet. In common with most fall dresses, this frock has a high neckline and interesting sleeve treatment. The jeweled necklet represents a popular accessory for black silk frocks. This type of dress may be worn later under a coat and can be used as a basic dress for numerous types of accessories.

Paris Goes Back to Louis XIV for Winter Fashions

Paris (AP).—The reign of Louis XIV and the voluminous fashions of his day appear to be the strongest influence in winter styles launched in Paris.

This influence was reflected in evening clothes in the striking evening silhouette—excessively full and either tea cosy or lampshade shape. It was developed in stiff fabrics—velvet, duchess satin, lame, brocades, moire, faille and broadcloth—as well as in tulles and laces.

Sometimes the hips were emphasized in pannier or other drapery, or in loose panel or bustle drapes. Evening sleeves widened the shoulders. There also were high, mutton-leg styles.

Evening waists were slightly high. Evening skirts were ground length, except for a small number which were ankle length. There were many trains. Day skirts were short, varying from 14 to 16 inches from the ground.

The Louis XIV period was reflected in day clothes in such ampler treatments as wider skirts, larger sleeves and bodices. A return to wide, stiff shoulders in coats and jackets and to soft shirrings in dress sleeves was noted.

"So have I. Who does your work?"

"Oh, say, you ought to try Dr. Drill. People come here from Chicago to have him work on their teeth."

"Well Dr. Pullem simply worked a miracle in my mouth. Look at that—did you ever see such marvelous bridgework?"

"Look at this—would you ever guess this tooth wasn't my own?"

"Well, I just suffered tortures until I went to Dr. Pullem. He just made a new woman out of me."

"Say, I hadn't slept a wink for a week until Dr. Drill fixed my mouth."

"Well I know Dr. Pullem must be the best in town because a trained nurse told me she always took her nephew to him."

"Well I know another dentist who always sends his wife to Dr. Drill. You'd think a dentist—"

"Well all the big people in town go to Dr. Pullem. Honestly he's so busy—"

"Say you have to wait hours to get in to Dr. Drill."

"Well I just want to tell you one thing—your dentist may be all right—but if you ever get pyorrnea you go straight to Dr. Pullem."

"Say, listen—now you don't have to listen to me if you don't want to—but if you want a really good dentist you just try Dr. Drill."

Banana Is Good To Give Energy; Also Digestible

By Logan Clendenning, M. D.

The banana bears fruit but once. When it is garnered, the tree is cut down.

Such want of her usual prodigality on the part of nature would seem to argue that the banana has especial virtues. And this argument is upheld by the suffrage of mankind for five centuries or more, and by the considered verdict of modern dietetic science.

The original home of the banana probably was Asia. The Arabs, in the course of their traffic in slaves and ivory, moving across Africa, gradually carried it from tribe to tribe. Historically, it merges into documentary recognition in 1482, when the Portuguese found it on the Guinea coast of the Atlantic.

To America this fruit was brought by Father Tomas de Berlanga in 1516. He planted a few banana roots on the Island of Santo Domingo. Its introduction to the United States was probably as late as 1850.

But our grandfathers had no experience of this delicacy, because not until 1899 did the banana industry assume any proportions here.

As a food it has many advantages. It has more foodstuff and less water than any other fresh fruit. It contains 22 per cent starch or sugar and thus is high in energy requirement. It also contains considerable protein. Its vitamin content is good. It is also palatable, appetizing and highly digestible.

For these reasons and others, it has deservedly become popular as a form of reducing diet. Several years ago Dr. Harrop, of Baltimore, suggested the milk and banana diet for reducing. Milk and bananas make up a fairly balanced ration, containing together all the food elements and most of the vitamins and minerals. Besides, bananas are "filling" and satify hunger better than most foods.

When used as a continuous diet, one or two large bananas are used with a glass of milk for breakfast and lunch. For the evening meal, the diet may be modified by serving a clear soup, a slice of lean meat, one or two portions of a green vegetable, a slice of bread and butter and a portion of uncooked fruit.

Exercise Needed By Thin Women To Gain Curves

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT SEEMS we've been unfair to the thin girls! Things have come to a pretty pass, they write, with curves the measure of a beautiful figure—and the reducers getting all the attention! There is more than a little basis for their complaints, and to make amends two special articles this week will help the girls who want to gain weight.

To make up for this neglect, I have consulted Ann Delafield, figure authority at a Fifth Avenue salon, famous as a champion of the too-thin girl, and a firm believer in the right of every girl or woman to be as lovely as she can possibly make herself. And I only wish you could see how lovely she is! Although she is past 50, she doesn't look a minute over 30!

Every beauty program, according to this authority, must begin with normalizing the weight through a routine of common sense rules. If you will follow these rules carefully for six to eight months you will have a figure you can be proud of! That is the promise she makes.

Get Up Early.

In the first place, if you are thin and getting thinner, don't lie in bed in the morning and expect to build yourself up. The very first rule is to get up and out of doors for the invigorating activity that will increase oxygen consumption. This, in turn, increases your powers of assimilation so that you eat more food and digest it more easily. Afterwards, if you like and are able to do it, you may go back to bed.

This plan of exercise before meals and rest afterwards is advised for every meal of the day. If you work for a living and cannot follow such a strict routine, you must arrange to be out-of-doors for at least two hours a day, even though it means getting up earlier. At night, after office hours, take a vigorous walk for an hour, walking rapidly, even running.

The thin girl has the mistaken idea that exercise is only for the overweight, whereas the secret of bringing the weight to normal is to stimulate the circulation through outdoor activity. You cannot build up firm muscle tissue and acquire a lovely figure through laziness.

No Night Life.

As a rule the thin girls tend to lead a sedentary life during the day, storing up energy for night life. This, Miss Delafield declares, is exactly what you should not do, and in her gaining program there is no night life. You must plan for physical activity during the day and for rest at night. That may sound very dull to you, but it is the price of the beautiful figure you have been wishing for.

After two hours—or more—out of doors during the day, you will not mind beginning your preparations for bed at 9 o'clock. And if you follow the rest of Miss Delafield's instructions you will be asleep at 10! Here they are: "Take a tepid bath and stay in it for 20 minutes, then literally droop into bed and have a long drink of hot milk. If you cannot go to sleep, read the dictionary, or the Constitution of the United States—no detective stories!"

This will get you started on your weight gaining program, and in tomorrow's article I will give you still more of Miss Delafield's rules for building up and beautifying the figure.

Clock Method Cited for Cooks In Hot Weather

Alarm to Tell When Dish Is Finished; Wife Can Wait on Porch.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IN THE OLD days of wood and coal stoves many houses boasted a summer kitchen—a shed away from the house where all the summer cooking was done to save the house itself from the intense heat of the stoves.

We don't need such drastic measures these days, for our well-insulated gas and electric stoves cut down heat to a minimum. But even modern stoves can get a lady into quite a dither if the day is hot and the oven is going.

The Alarm Clock Method.

There are several ways to save yourself from "slaving over the hot stove" on summer days. There is, first, the matter of simple meals with a minimum of fuss and bother. If you find a one-dish meal requiring the use of the oven—and it usually does, worse luck—try using the alarm clock method to keep yourself removed from the heat.

Set your alarm clock when you place the casserole in the oven to a time when you think the dish should have finished cooking. Then go out on the porch or into the cool living room and leave the dish to stew in its own juices. Comes the alarm, you take the dish from the oven, leave the door open (heat escapes much quicker this way), turn on an electric fan in the kitchen to carry the hot air out and retire until the kitchen is cool again.

A Fan and a Cake of Ice.

If, however, there are other tasks that must be done in the hot kitchen, keep your fan going all the time the stove is in use. It's a good idea to have the fan placed as near the ceiling as possible—to carry off the heat that rises. And then there's the trick of having a fan blow directly on a cake of ice in a dish-pan—one of the earliest methods of air-conditioning.

Of course, the very best way to save yourself is to install a really efficient modern ventilator that carries off hot air and kitchen smells at the same time. These are usually built into a window, but are not too expensive when you consider the comfort they can give. And some homemakers have found it cooling to invest in a small electric oven for all summer cooking.

This will give off much less heat than a gas range and is usually equipped with an automatic timer that allows you to set the dial, go away and forget your cooking. The oven will shut itself off when the meat or whatever it is is cooked. One friend of ours has one of these handy affairs and cooks all her roasts and such on the back porch. She has set up a table near the window, attaches the oven to an outdoor plug, and there she is—cool as a cucumber and so is her kitchen.

Short Skirts Shown In Creed's Collection

From Charles Creed, in Paris, comes word that in his fall collection he is showing very short skirts, waterproof velvet, a wide range of red, fur and grosgrain trimming, and much collar detail.

He adheres rather closely to the feminine line, stressing normal waistlines. High-necked blouses and buttoned jackets are stressed. Also rich materials, such as velvet, lame, grosgrain and faille.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 9.

BY THIS time the theme exhibit of our world's fair must be pretty well known from coast to coast, or even from Dan to Beersheba. Technically the tall spike and the big round ball are known as the Trylon and the Perisphere, or more familiarly, as the Sally Rand Balloon and Grover Whalen's Knitting Needle. All three of the local ball clubs have the things appliqued on their uniform sleeves, and by this time millions must wonder what they are all about. In fact, my friend Henry Dreyfuss, who designed it, says he is going daffy from answering questions about the brain-baby, selected after 1,035 other designs had been tossed away.

ALICE HUGHES

The knitting needle is 700 feet high, and the balloon is 200 feet in diameter outside. That's a lot of balloon. The Trylon, we may assume, simply represents human aspiration, or reaching for the moon. But the Perisphere is going to have a thrilling show inside, which will display snappily and excitingly the World of Tomorrow—which is the general thought behind the whole fair. Crowds will be carried around the inside of the balloon on a moving platform, and they can see the whole display in six minutes. Overhead will be the firmament, shown by all manner of film and light trickery much in the manner of modern planetariums, and below will be the city of tomorrow, buzzing and bubbling with life. "Democracity," they aim to call it.

• • • •

Henry explains that this will be a new and practical city, with lower buildings, traffic-free streets for pedestrians, greenery for nature-lovers and all sorts of things. So, very briefly, this is what goes on with the Trylon and Perisphere, whose steel framework already rises out in the Flushing Swamps. For more intimate knowledge, we'll just have to wait till next April.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Antonia Brico, conductor of our Woman's Symphony, rose to new fame the other night when she waved the stick over our Philharmonic Symphony in an outdoor concert. Critics, while none too cordial to her interpretations, made it clear that La Brico quickly established that she was boss over the fiddlers and tooters. The critics, in fact, said the band made too much noise. "Din," they called it.

We have been hosting a couple of gay honeymooners—Lee Tracy, of stage and films, and the former Helen Thomas Wyse. They made jollity several evenings over at Ben Marden's Riviera, at the Jersey end of the George Washington Bridge. Then they sailed away for London and a stage job for Lee.

• • • •

The other day I visited Elizabeth Hawes, of "Fashion Is Spinach" fame, at the New York Hospital where my spouse spent all last summer, and then I went to the glass-walled nursery and personally inspected Liz's new son, Master Gavrick Losey.

• • • •

Colleen Moore's been in town, and shopping for guess what. The old flaming youth girl was on the look-see for a complete Georgian fireplace to install in a new house.

• • • •

Cora Scovil, the noted mannequin-maker, just turned up again from Italy, and I'll bet my copper-toed shoes the fall crop of Scovil mannequins will have a sort of madonna look.

• • • •

We certainly are getting to be pushers. Numbers of the girls are inching their way into the sacred and cool Men's Grill of the Ritz Carlton Hotel. Poor chaps, no escape! I only know of two big bars into which women positively can not poke their pretty heads—those of the Biltmore and Waldorf. It tickles my dissolute spouse into fits to see ladies get the bum's rush from these places—which they do, in a nice way.

• • • •

Flash, bulletin and new lead. The seers of style have spoken. Skirts next fall will be 15 or 16 inches from the floor, which is more than a mite shorter than last season. Wasn't 14 the figure then? This new length again puts the burden of proof on our stockings, which must be absolutely perfect lest we be ashamed. The hosiery people have been busy as humming-birds getting out lines styled to all the costume colors promised for autumn.

Cuban Diplomat Plans For Holiday in Europe

By Hope Ridings Miller.

While most members of the Diplomatic Corps are making plans to return to Washington from their vacations, the popular Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Jose T. Baron and Senora de Baron, are packing their bags to leave for a holiday in Europe. They will be off Friday for Boston, and will sail from there the following day on the Samaria for Ireland.

After a visit in Dublin—all roads seem to lead to Dublin these days—they will go on to London, then to France and probably to Switzerland before returning to Washington the latter part of September. Shortly after arriving here, they will pack their bags for a second journey, and before half their friends know they are back from Europe, they will be off to Havana for several weeks.

In planning the trip to Europe they decided that no matter where else they might visit, their itinerary must include Ireland. American-born Senora de Baron is of Irish descent and as long as she can remember has wanted to see the home of her ancestors.

This journey abroad will be Senora de Baron's first, and it will mark Dr. Baron's first real vacation in, as he expressed it, "many, many years." The entire European sojourn will be for pleasure only, while the trip to Havana will combine work with play.

By the time the social season rolls around, however, the Barons will be back in Washington once more and, with other members of the Cuban Embassy staff, will have an important part in the whirl of late fall and winter events.

Virginia Sculptor Leaves for England

Another leaving these parts just when most persons are starting back is Stephen Hopkins Walker, artist of Falls Church, Va., who teaches sculpture at the University of Virginia and will come to Washington this winter to conduct special classes in sculpture. Having sailed Saturday, Mr. Walker is now on his way to England, where he will execute a portrait commission. After finishing that work he will spend the remainder of the summer painting on the Irish sea coast.

Mr. Walktr is widely known here. Duncan Phillips, noted Capital patron of arts, has evinced much interest in Mr. Walker's work and several examples of it are currently on exhibit in the Phillips Memorial Gallery. Shortly before he sailed for England, Mr. Walker told friends he hoped to have a special exhibit at the Gallery this fall.

Wife Working on Series of Books

While her husband is abroad, Mrs. Walker, the former Miss Lu Verne Crabtree, is in Daytona, Fla., working away on a series of textbooks, to be called the Crabtree primers. Already accepted for publication by the Oxford Press, the books will carry the indorsement of Dorothy Canfield, who visited the Walkers in their Falls Church home not long ago.

Their house, incidentally, is something of a show place with its colonial effects and unique studio. Washingtonians who have been fortunate enough to be guests of the Walkers report the place is one of the most interesting around these parts.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker were widely feted before their departure—one to Europe, the other to Florida. Among parties given for them shortly before they left was a dinner at which Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Schultz, of Falls Church, entertained. Dr. Schultz and Mr. Walker are friends of long standing, having once been classmates.

The Rev. Russell Clinchy Officiates at Quiet Ceremony Here.

In a quiet ceremony last evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Way, 8051 Parkside Lane, Miss Elizabeth Brubaker and Benjamin Joseph Grant, jr., were married. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Dawson Brubaker, of Washington, while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Grant, of West Palm Beach, Fla.

The Rev. Russell Clinchy officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony, which took place before an altar banked with white roses, gladioli and ferns. Mrs. Raymond Dillman played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in blue silk marquisette over white marquisette, trimmed with blue velvet bows on the girdle and sleeves. Her floor length veil was also of marquisette, and she carried a rose point lace handkerchief, a gift of her maid of honor. A bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley completed her ensemble.

Sister-in-Law Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. M. M. Brubaker, of Wilmington, Del., was matron of honor. Her frock of yellow marquisette was fashioned with a fitted bodice, a full skirt and puffed sleeves, set off with long white lace gloves, and her bouquet was of yellow gladioli and blue delphinium.

Miss Christie Bell Kennedy, of Atlanta, Ga., the maid of honor, was gowned similarly to the matron of honor. Other attendants included little Mary Worth Warren, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Warren, and Robert Brubaker, 5-year-old nephew of the bride, who carried ribbons toward the altar to form an aisle for her.

The bridegroom's father, Mr. Grant, was best man, and the only usher was Dr. M. M. Brubaker, of Wilmington, Del., brother of the bride.

Couple to Live In Arlington, Va.

Immediately following the ceremony, there was a reception, at which mothers of the bride and bridegroom stood with the wedding party to receive the guests. Mrs. Brubaker was gowned in black marquisette trimmed in chantilly lace, while Mrs. Grant wore ashes-of-roses chiffon.

Shortly after the reception the couple left for a wedding trip through the Shenandoah Valley and the Allegheny Mountains. As her traveling costume the bride had chosen white embroidered linen, cut on tailored lines, a hat to match and a dark blue cape with other accessories of the same shade.

Upon their return from their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Grant will make their home at 251 North Thomas street, Arlington, Va. The bride attended Sarah Lawrence College, while her husband went to the University of Florida.

W. R. Gray Weds Jean Hamilton

Hyattsville Rites Are Held With Rev. D. H. Evans Officiating.

The First Presbyterian Church of Hyattsville, Md., yesterday afternoon was the scene of the wedding of Miss Jean Grace Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hamilton, and William Ralph Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Harold Gray, of Chevy Chase, Md. The Rev. D. Hobart Evans officiated at the 4 o'clock ceremony.

Before an altar banked with palms and large baskets of blended bridal-white flowers, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in white net, made floor length along princess lines, with a square-cut neckline and small puffed sleeves. Her shoulder-length veil was held by a pearl trimmed tiara, and she wore a single strand of pearls at her throat. The wedding bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Isabel Hamilton, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore a gown of shell pink organdie, also made on princess lines, with puffed sleeves, a high neckline, small collar, and a row of tiny buttons extending from the throat to the waist.

Miss Elizabeth Cole, and Miss Dorothy Clarke, were bridesmaids. They wore frocks of pale blue organdie, made on the same lines as the gown of the maid of honor.

Little Diana Evans, daughter of the Minister, was the flower girl. She was dressed in a frock of peach net, with a poke bonnet of the same material and carried a colonial bouquet. Pyke Johnson, jr., of Washington, was best man, and the ushers were Joseph Hamilton, brother of the bride; Warren Gilbertson, of Decatur Heights, Md.; Harry Swanson and Charles Peck, of Washington.

There was a reception after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Assisting the couple in receiving were the bride's mother, wearing an afternoon dress of powder blue lace, with a leghorn hat and a shoulder corsage of pink roses, and the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Gray, wearing lace also and a corsage of pink roses.

Assisting in the dining room were four friends of the bride, Miss Evalyn Sullivan, Miss Sara Stoddard, Miss Mildred Gray and Miss Deborah Keister. When Mr. and Mrs. Gray departed on their wedding trip, a ten-day motoring journey of unannounced destination, the bride was wearing a navy blue sheer frock with white accessories and a large leghorn hat. Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of the University of Maryland and will make their home in Silver Spring, Md.

Irish Legation Staff to Greet Corrigan Alone

Society Disappointed by the News That Tea for Flier Will Be Quiet One.

Members of Washington society still in town who had hoped for a large reception at the Irish Legation in honor of the miss-and-hit Irish-American aviator, Douglas Corrigan, will have to wait until next time.

The Irish Charge d'Affaires, Robert Brennan, has decided in favor of a small tea and reception at the Legation, rather than a lavish one. Mr. Corrigan will be greeted quietly—and that should be a novelty for him—this afternoon at the Legation just by members of the Erin staff and by Mr. Brennan's family.

As arangements are now, Mr. Brennan will be the only man in Washington to greet the flier twice, for he is scheduled earlier this afternoon to be the principal speaker at a luncheon to be given Corrigan at the Willard Hotel.

Among members of the Legation staff who will have a first-hand chance to make the acquaintance of the flier is Garth Healy, the new Secretary, who, with Mrs. Healy, has just arived in the Capital.

Mr. Healy, newest addition to the diplomatic contingent here, is well known in the United States, having spent much time in New York in 1921 and 1922 in connection with the sale of Irish government bonds. He came back to this country four years ago and spent several months in New York again, at that time attending to payments on the bonds.

Flying Women, Here for Corrigan Greeting, To Honor Eckner Today on 70th Birthday

Pioneer Air Group Meet at Afternoon Tea; Make Short Talks.

A message congratulating Dr. Hugo Eckner on his seventieth birthday will go to him today from pioneer flying women here to participate in Washington's celebration honoring Douglas Corrigan. They are Viola Gentry, noted woman pilot; Clara Adams, who was the only woman passenger on the Graf Zeppelin's return from her maiden trip to the United States; Clara Rohlff, the former Mrs. Victor Roos, founder of the Woman's Aeronautical Association, and Mrs. Jack Stearns Gray, of Washington.

Announcement the message would be sent to Dr. Eckner on the day of Washington's Corrigan fete was made yesterday afternoon at a "pre-Corrigan" tea given at Alva Belmont House by the Woman's Party in honor of the famous women. Miss Adams, in an informal talk, told of her experience in flying aboard the dirigible and of the plan to dispatch birthday greetings to the commander.

Visitors Speak 'As Well as Fly

Each of the women talked briefly and their apt descriptions of experiences in the air convinced the guests the gift of showmanship goes hand in hand with a fondness for air. Miss Adams, tall and somewhat angular in build, told her story with all the charm of a professional entertainer. She is not a pilot and never intends to be, she said, but probably has flown more miles since 1914 than any other woman not in the profession. She made her first trip on the DO-X from Brazil, made the first crossing on the Hindenburg, and has many other "firsts" to her credit.

She was a member of the committee to welcome Corrigan on his return to New York and went out to the ship to greet him aboard the mayor's boat. She amused her hearers with a description of how she called up to him, "Here's your uncle, Douglas," pointing to the Rev. S. Fraser Langford, who stood beside her, and how he waved back.

"I love flying because it lifts one above the earth and trivial things seem to slip away," she said. "I never cease to marvel at man's God-given power to build a machine like a bird which carries far more than its own weight in the air."

Flying Career Began Early

Miss Gentry's flying career began at the age of 11 with a short trip in a plane piloted by George Gray, husband of Mrs. Jack Sterling Gray, who is chairman of the Pioneer Women of the Air and hostess to the group. The trip was made without the permission of her parents and resulted in a sound spanking, but the punishment failed to curb her enthusiasm.

Miss Gentry said the women had left the field of commercial flying to the men, but expressed the hope women would be given a place in the Army and Navy Reserve. She paid tribute to Mrs. Stevens, and told of the endurance record she and her husband set in 1912, staying in the air 2 hours and 12 minutes.

At her suggestion, the company stood silent in tribute to Amelia Earhart. Miss Earhart was an active member of the Woman's Party, and a few years ago was a guest at breakfast in the garden of Alva Belmont House. She was also a member of the Zonta Club, which entertained last evening at a dinner at Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern in honor of the visitors. A memorial scholarship for the education of women in aeronautics has been established in her honor by Zonta International.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of the national council of the Woman's Party, presided during the program, and Mrs. Horace Pote, chairman of the District of Columbia committee, was cohostess. Both met the noted company when they arrived at the airport. Miss Olive Hurlburt, of Detroit, program chairman for the party's approaching national convention, who is now in Washington, presided at the punch table, and little Miss Marguerite Pote, youngest member of the party, assisted in serving.

Among the guests were Mrs. Helen Hunt West, Miss Laura Berrien, newly elected president of the National Association of Women Lawyers; Miss Sarah Grogan, Miss Myrl Rhine, Miss Martha Souder, Helene Hill Weed, Mrs. M. Louise Thomas, Mrs. Cecil McReynolds of the people's mandate committee; Miss Emma T. Hahm, president of the Zonta Club; Dr. Mildred Dickerson, Miss Aurelle Burnside, Mrs. John Stewart, Miss Josephine Rich, Frances Powell Hill, Burnita Shelton Matthews, Dr. Lucy Shaw, Miss Catherine Fisher, Miss Eva Werbe and, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Members of the Zonta Club present at the dinner at the Toll House Tavern were Miss Hahm, Mrs. Emily Dickinson, Mrs. Louise Stambaugh, Miss Ethel Hess, Mrs. Caroline Longfellow, Miss Mabel Strider, and her guest, Miss Esther Lohrer; Miss Florence Sindell, Miss Ann Sorber, Miss Alice Fay, Miss Frances Powell Hill, Miss Mary Sigman, Mrs. Lillian Cox Athey and her guest, Miss Muriel Hoffman; Mrs. Marion Hines Taylor, Miss Anna Muddiman, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Howe, Dr. Dickerson, Carrington McCallip, Miss Clara McGrath, Miss Winifred Burwell, Mrs. Amelia Gude Thomas, Mrs. Celia Rounds, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, Miss Catherine Fox, Dr. Edith Seville Coale.

After the dinner the visitors were taken to the musicale presented by Mrs. John Simmons and Mme. Correa at the Y. W. C. A.

"MADAME CHAIRMAN"

By Suzanne.

THE FRIENDS OF THE BLIND SOCIETY, of Washington, has secured a large cottage at Long Beach on the Chesapeake, where many of the blind residents of the Capital have been provided with real vacations this summer.

Miss Louise Moore, secretary of the society, herself blind, is hostess at the summer cottage and different groups of almost 35 in each group have been taken down every two weeks for a fortnight's stay. They have enjoyed boating, swimming and fishing.

This is the third season the society has had a summer vacation spot for the blind, but the first time such a large number has been accommodated. Mrs. Ross T. McIntyre is president of the local society and Miss Frances Small is vice president. The sponsors and officers, except for Miss Moore, are sighted friends of the sightless.

Protection of Nation From Within and Without to Be Topic of Study Group Program Charted by Mrs. Imogene Emery, of Iowa.

National defense "begins at home" in the opinion of Mrs. Imogene Emery, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, new chairman of the committee on national defense through patriotic education of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The program for the coming year will stress good citizenship, which she considers the first line of defense for American ideals and institutions.

"One of the requirements of good citizenship is intelligent use of the franchise," said Mrs. Emery, who is here spending a few days on business at her office in National D. A. R. headquarters. "When women accepted the privilege of the vote, they assumed with it the responsibility for informing themselves as to issues before them and exercising their right of expression."

Not only will the committee on national defense encourage members of the D. A. R. to be alert to their own duty to vote but will also suggest to committee chairmen throughout the country, the organization of groups with D. A. A. leaders, for the purpose of studying current questions. Membership in these will not be restricted to D. A. R. members.

"I have had too much experience with women's apathy regarding the exercise of their franchise, not to feel it is a matter which concerns the welfare of the country," said Mrs. Emery. "They also need to realize that the primaries are as important as the final election."

Constructive Work Is Program Plan

No radical changes will be made in the national defense committee's program as it was carried on under the chairmanship of Mrs. Earl Vinton Sisson, who served the last three years. A handbook on national defense, with suggestions for programs will soon be issued. This is one of the matters on which Mrs. Emery was conferring yesterday with members of her staff. The "National Defense News will also be published six times a year, with Mrs. Emery as editor and Mrs. Paul Schaff, of the headquarters office, as secretary.

This serves, among other things, to inform members of any subversive activities which are being carried on in any section. The committee, however, is directing its program in constructive channels, designed to emphasize and safeguard American ideals, and thus combat whatever would seek to undermine them.

In addition to being chairman of national defense, Mrs. Emery was also appointed by the president general, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., as a member of a committee to review the history of the society and determine the exact date of its founding, looking toward the golden jubilee celebration. Other members of the committee are Miss Janet Richards, who is now in Maine, and Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrave, of Laurel, Md. Mrs. Musgrave and Miss Richards conferred before the latter left for her summer home and Mrs. Musgrave and Mrs. Emery studied old records together yesterday. Following their conference, Mrs. Musgrave entertained at a small luncheon at the Carlton for Mrs. Emery. Miss Beatrice Clephane and Mrs. Elizabeth Cox were the other guests. All are members of Kappa Beta Pi Legal sorority.

Mrs. Emery for six years has had her own law office and practice in Cedar Rapids. Previous to that she was for six years first deputy clerk of the District Court.

She has been a member of the D. A. R. for ten years and is immediate past State regent of her State. Before holding that office she had served as chapter agent, State treasurer for six years, and State corresponding secretary. During her term as State regent she was active in forming junior committees within the chapters. There are now 39 of these junior groups in the 98 Iowa chapters and they are sponsoring the college education of a girl from Tamasee School who is now attending the Iowa State College at Ames.

Lundeens to Leave.

Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen plan to leave next week for Minnesota where they will spend the remainder of the summer at their place on Lake Minnetonka. They will be accompanied by their children, Miss Joan Lundeen and Ernest Lundeen, jr., who will stay with their parents until the middle of September, returning at that time for the opening of school in Washington.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Striped Chipmunk Uses His Head.

His destiny in truth commands.
Old Mother Nature.

Striped Chipmunk was nonplused. This means that he didn't know just what to think of the situation. He had grown accustomed to finding seeds, nuts or other goodies at this particular place. Sometimes they were spread on the ground for him. Sometimes Sue held them out to him and he took them from her hand. This morning there were no seeds there and only two peanuts on the ground. These he promptly carried away and then returned.

Now Striped Chipmunk has sharp eyes. Yes, sir, he has sharp eyes. They miss very little. They hadn't missed three peanuts that were not on the ground. Those peanuts were where he never before had seen peanuts or any other nuts—swinging in mid-air. The middle one was nearest to the ground. Striped Chipmunk stood up beneath it and stretched up to his full height. He stretched until he lost his balance but all he could do was to touch that peanut and set it swinging. He tried and tried again. It was useless. Those peanuts were beyond his reach.

Striped Chipmunk sat down and studied those nuts. That one nearest him had almost stopped swinging now. A moment later it hung merely twisting this way and that. Striped Chipmunk suddenly leaped up with all his might. It was a good jump. He caught that peanut with both hands and held on. Then he pulled himself up and bent his body around and up until he was hanging to that peanut with all four feet. It didn't take him a second to see what held that peanut. His sharp teeth went to work and in a second he dropped to the ground, but he still had the peanut.

This one having been put away Striped Chipmunk returned for the others. He jumped as before but only touched the peanut. He tried the other, and couldn't even touch that one. Back to the other he went and worked himself into quite a frenzy as he jumped and jumped in vain. Those peanuts were provoking. Never had he seen peanuts or anything else quite so provoking. They were just out of his reach, yet so little that they seemed within reach.

Striped Chipmunk sat down and studied those peanuts. He couldn't get them from the ground. Of this he was certain. It was impossible. But if he couldn't get them from below perhaps he could get them from above. He climbed to the top of one of the two posts between which was stretched a taut cord from which were suspended the two peanuts at the ends of strings. He reached out and took hold of that cord. He believed he could walk it. He crept out a little way. Yes, he could keep his balance, small as that cord was.

He crept out a little farther. Presently he was right above one of those peanuts. He looked down at it. It was farther from him than when he looked up at it from below.

"I wonder if I can reach it if I hang by my heels," thought Striped Chipmunk.

He turned until he was sitting crosswise on that cord. How he could keep his balance was more than Tommy, Sue and Cammy, who were watching from a distance, could understand. Then, gripping that cord tightly with his hind feet, Striped Chipmunk let himself down until he was hanging head down, stretched to his full length. Still that peanut was far beyond his reach.

With one hand he took hold of the string. In a flash an idea came to him. He pulled on that string. It lifted the peanut. He reached with the other paw and grabbed the string and pulled it up. So, hand over hand, or paw over paw, if you like that better, he pulled up that string until that peanut was in his grasp. Then he pulled himself back up on the cord, bit off the string where it was tied to the peanut, carefully made his way back to the post, scampered down this and away with his prize.

In a little while he was back. There was no hesitancy this time. Up a post he ran and out along that cord, hung head down and pulled up the other peanut. Then he was away with that.

"Instinct or intelligence?" asked Tommy as he tied three more peanuts to the cord.

Washington Man Feared Drowned At Florida Beach

Miami, Fla., Aug. 9 (AP).—John Laskin, 30, of 4203 Arkansas avenue, Washington, D. C., was believed to have drowned today during an early morning swim in the surf.

An all-day search failed to find Laskin, whose shoes, sweater and cigarettes were found on the beach, with his dog tied to a nearby post. Capt. Ernest Wiese, of the Miami Beach Life Patrol, said Laskin might have drowned in a gully created by recent treacherous tidal eddies.

Laskin came here a week ago with his wife, Mrs. Aubrey Laskin; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kreger, of Portsmouth, Va., and a friend, Jack Hoffenbert, of Washington.

Mrs. Laskin said her husband had been accustomed to taking early swims. He is a salesman for Hill & Tibbetts in Washington.

A tamed version of "The Taming of the Shrew," Shakespeare's rowdy drama of domesticity, was presented last night at Jesup Blair Park in Silver Spring, Md., by a group of Girl Scouts of America.

The girls, ranging from 11 to 17 years of age, explained yesterday they selected the play for presentation at the close of the Girl Scout Day Camp because it seemed "easiest" of all they had read in Lamb's purified "Tales of Shakespeare."

They admitted they were a little shaken when they came face to face with an unexpurgated text, but bravely crossed out the lines they didn't like and went on with the show.

The Girl Scout version was adapted by 17-year-old Lydia Ewing, of Takoma Park, Md., who also played the role of the madcap Petruchio, husband and tamer of the shrew.

Lydia eliminated the whipping scenes—and presumably some of the lines which don't come up to the Girl Scout creed—and rewrote much of it in her own words. The result pleased her young fellow-actresses, who were particularly fond of the hair-pulling and dish-throwing which she allowed to remain in the script.

The hair-pulling was handled effectively last night by Jean Hoyt, 12, a pretty blonde from Takoma Park, D. C., as the shrewish Katherine in the play. The victim of her efforts was Gertrude Jean Potts, 12, of Takoma Park, Md., who played the part of Katherine's sister, Bianca.

They were supported by a cast of about a dozen Girl Scouts. The audience consisted of the girls' parents, gathered to watch the closing celebration at the summer "day camp."

Board Forbids Restaurants to Penalize Pay

Minimum Wage Officials Rule Laundries Must Bear Bonding Cost.

The Minimum Wage Board yesterday handed down two decisions intended to stop certain practices on the part of employers.

The board ruled public housekeeping employers must not make deductions for breakage of dishes and glassware, nor could laundries made deductions for "bonding purposes" from the salaries of employes who handle money.

It was brought out at the executive session of the board that many employers were penalizing the waitresses for breaking glasses and dishes, and that this deduction was not permitted under the minimum wage order which was authorized several months ago.

Many complaints were brought to the attention of the board that the employers were making a "good thing" of the breakage custom. In some cases amounts as high as $2 per week were deducted from the basic wages of $13.25.

In the other ruling the board clamped down on a laundry employer who deducted $2 each week from the salaries of laundry store clerks for "bonding purposes."

The board explained the employer bonded each employe handling money, but made the employe foot the bill.

15,126 Employes Added to Agencies in Rest of Nation, With AAA, Postoffice, Navy, PWA and WPA Heading the List.

Increased Federal spending authorized by the Seventy-fifth Congress added 1,218 jobs to Uncle Sam's pay roll in the District in June and 15,126 elsewhere in the Nation, figures published yesterday by the Civil Service Commission showed. Government employes in the District totaled 115,774 with the increase and outside the District the total was raised to 741,746.

Cash spent for pay rolls was increased in June by $3,087,888, bringing the pay roll for that month to $128,071,062, as compared with $124,983,174 for May. The agricultural adjustment act of 1938 accounted for about one-half of the increase, 8,547 new employes in June bringing AAA employment to an all-time high of 102,125.

Except for the Postoffice Department, where the increase was more than 4,000 due to employment of substitutes during the vacation period, bringing the total to 291,613, the next largest rise was in the Navy Department, which added 1,747 as a result of the naval expansion act, to bring Navy civil personnel up to 41,795.

The Works Progress Administration and the Public Works Administration felt the first stimulation of the spending-lending act in June, when WPA added 1,062 employes and PWA 480 to bring their respective totals to 25,815 and 4,183.

Of 857,520 employees in the service, 64,879 were "force-account" employes (employes engaged in construction projects, such as building, naval vessel, or road construction), 747,878 were full-time employes and 44,763 were part-time employes engaged on other activities.

During the month the Treasury Department dropped temporary employes in the Internal Revenue service who were engaged on income tax work. The War Department also dropped temporary employes in the engineer department who had been employed on emergency flood control.

During June, 62,984 or 7.3 per cent, of the total employes in the service were administrative employes paid from funds provided by the emergency relief appropriation acts of 1935, 1936 and 1938. This represents an increase in employment in this group of 1,837 employes.

2 Colored Men Held In $200 Store Robbery

Police yesterday arrested two colored men wanted in connection with a $200 grocery store robbery Monday night. Police said both confessed. They were arrested in their car which stopped for a traffic signal at Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Gas Co. Asked To Cut Rates To Business

Decrease of $53,630 Would Not Affect Residences.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday asked Washington Gas Light Co. officials to reduce their rates to commercial and industrial firms by $53,630.

Domestic consumers will not be affected by the rate changes.

The company, on its own behalf, filed a schedule for rate changes which would decrease their rates by $40,500. Following final hearing yesterday on the two proposed schedules, the commission stated it would study further which would be authorized.

The difference between the two schedules, $13,130, will depend on whether the commission will allow an item by the company for promotion of socalled "gas kitchens."

The schedule proposed by the company under direction of the commission would reduce two of the brackets under the Class C schedule which is available for commercial and industrial uses of gas in bakeries, restaurants, hotels, churches and manufacturing establishments.

Rates to customers using more than 10,000 and less than 100,000 cubic feet of gas per month would be lowered from 6.5 cents to 6.1 cents per 100 cubic feet and from 5.8 to 5.4 cents per 100 cubic feet for the next 900,000 cubic feet per month.

The company said this schedule would afford a saving of $52,470 in the next year.

The company's own schedule was to change Schedule C rates to 6.2 cents for consumers using between 10,000 and 100,000 cubic feet per month, and to change to 5.5 cents the rate for the next 900,000 cubic feet per month.

Both proposed schedules would reduce the minimum monthly bill in the wholesale apartment house service rate from 75 cents to 65 cents per apartment per month, which would amount to a saving of $1,160 per year. It was announced that only 20 apartment customers would be affected. The commission will decide on the two schedules today. The new rates would become effective September 7.

Washington Man Feared Drowned At Florida Beach

Miami, Fla., Aug. 9 (AP).—John Laskin, 30, of 4203 Arkansas avenue, Washington, D. C., was believed to have drowned today during an early morning swim in the surf.

An all-day search failed to find Laskin, whose shoes, sweater and cigarettes were found on the beach, with his dog tied to a nearby post. Capt. Ernest Wiese, of the Miami Beach Life Patrol, said Laskin might have drowned in a gully created by recent treacherous tidal eddies.

Laskin came here a week ago with his wife, Mrs. Aubrey Laskin; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kreger, of Portsmouth, Va., and a friend, Jack Hoffenbert, of Washington.

Mrs. Laskin said her husband had been accustomed to taking early swims. He is a salesman for Hill & Tibbetts in Washington.

A tamed version of "The Taming of the Shrew," Shakespeare's rowdy drama of domesticity, was presented last night at Jesup Blair Park in Silver Spring, Md., by a group of Girl Scouts of America.

The girls, ranging from 11 to 17 years of age, explained yesterday they selected the play for presentation at the close of the Girl Scout Day Camp because it seemed "easiest" of all they had read in Lamb's purified "Tales of Shakespeare."

They admitted they were a little shaken when they came face to face with an unexpurgated text, but bravely crossed out the lines they didn't like and went on with the show.

The Girl Scout version was adapted by 17-year-old Lydia Ewing, of Takoma Park, Md., who also played the role of the madcap Petruchio, husband and tamer of the shrew.

Lydia eliminated the whipping scenes—and presumably some of the lines which don't come up to the Girl Scout creed—and rewrote much of it in her own words. The result pleased her young fellow-actresses, who were particularly fond of the hair-pulling and dish-throwing which she allowed to remain in the script.

The hair-pulling was handled effectively last night by Jean Hoyt, 12, a pretty blonde from Takoma Park, D. C., as the shrewish Katherine in the play. The victim of her efforts was Gertrude Jean Potts, 12, of Takoma Park, Md., who played the part of Katherine's sister, Bianca.

They were supported by a cast of about a dozen Girl Scouts. The audience consisted of the girls' parents, gathered to watch the closing celebration at the summer "day camp."

Board Forbids Restaurants to Penalize Pay

Minimum Wage Officials Rule Laundries Must Bear Bonding Cost.

The Minimum Wage Board yesterday handed down two decisions intended to stop certain practices on the part of employers.

The board ruled public housekeeping employers must not make deductions for breakage of dishes and glassware, nor could laundries made deductions for "bonding purposes" from the salaries of employes who handle money.

It was brought out at the executive session of the board that many employers were penalizing the waitresses for breaking glasses and dishes, and that this deduction was not permitted under the minimum wage order which was authorized several months ago.

Many complaints were brought to the attention of the board that the employers were making a "good thing" of the breakage custom. In some cases amounts as high as $2 per week were deducted from the basic wages of $13.25.

In the other ruling the board clamped down on a laundry employer who deducted $2 each week from the salaries of laundry store clerks for "bonding purposes."

The board explained the employer bonded each employe handling money, but made the employe foot the bill.

15,126 Employes Added to Agencies in Rest of Nation, With AAA, Postoffice, Navy, PWA and WPA Heading the List.

Increased Federal spending authorized by the Seventy-fifth Congress added 1,218 jobs to Uncle Sam's pay roll in the District in June and 15,126 elsewhere in the Nation, figures published yesterday by the Civil Service Commission showed. Government employes in the District totaled 115,774 with the increase and outside the District the total was raised to 741,746.

Cash spent for pay rolls was increased in June by $3,087,888, bringing the pay roll for that month to $128,071,062, as compared with $124,983,174 for May. The agricultural adjustment act of 1938 accounted for about one-half of the increase, 8,547 new employes in June bringing AAA employment to an all-time high of 102,125.

Except for the Postoffice Department, where the increase was more than 4,000 due to employment of substitutes during the vacation period, bringing the total to 291,613, the next largest rise was in the Navy Department, which added 1,747 as a result of the naval expansion act, to bring Navy civil personnel up to 41,795.

The Works Progress Administration and the Public Works Administration felt the first stimulation of the spending-lending act in June, when WPA added 1,062 employes and PWA 480 to bring their respective totals to 25,815 and 4,183.

Of 857,520 employees in the service, 64,879 were "force-account" employes (employes engaged in construction projects, such as building, naval vessel, or road construction), 747,878 were full-time employes and 44,763 were part-time employes engaged on other activities.

During the month the Treasury Department dropped temporary employes in the Internal Revenue service who were engaged on income tax work. The War Department also dropped temporary employes in the engineer department who had been employed on emergency flood control.

During June, 62,984 or 7.3 per cent, of the total employes in the service were administrative employes paid from funds provided by the emergency relief appropriation acts of 1935, 1936 and 1938. This represents an increase in employment in this group of 1,837 employes.

Gas Co. Asked To Cut Rates To Business

Decrease of $53,630 Would Not Affect Residences.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday asked Washington Gas Light Co. officials to reduce their rates to commercial and industrial firms by $53,630.

Domestic consumers will not be affected by the rate changes.

The company, on its own behalf, filed a schedule for rate changes which would decrease their rates by $40,500. Following final hearing yesterday on the two proposed schedules, the commission stated it would study further which would be authorized.

The difference between the two schedules, $13,130, will depend on whether the commission will allow an item by the company for promotion of socalled "gas kitchens."

The schedule proposed by the company under direction of the commission would reduce two of the brackets under the Class C schedule which is available for commercial and industrial uses of gas in bakeries, restaurants, hotels, churches and manufacturing establishments.

Rates to customers using more than 10,000 and less than 100,000 cubic feet of gas per month would be lowered from 6.5 cents to 6.1 cents per 100 cubic feet and from 5.8 to 5.4 cents per 100 cubic feet for the next 900,000 cubic feet per month.

The company said this schedule would afford a saving of $52,470 in the next year.

The company's own schedule was to change Schedule C rates to 6.2 cents for consumers using between 10,000 and 100,000 cubic feet per month, and to change to 5.5 cents the rate for the next 900,000 cubic feet per month.

Both proposed schedules would reduce the minimum monthly bill in the wholesale apartment house service rate from 75 cents to 65 cents per apartment per month, which would amount to a saving of $1,160 per year. It was announced that only 20 apartment customers would be affected. The commission will decide on the two schedules today. The new rates would become effective September 7.

This Morning

Tagging All Bases.

The count seems to be one down and one to go in the American League managerial scramble. Mickey Cochrane came a cropper last week-end at Detroit and one more 1938 entry will probably be unhorsed. Gabby Street's job at St. Louis is fadinhg from under him if the signs are not playing us false. Every other pilot in the league appears to be safe.

POVICH.

At St. Louis, Street will doubtless finish the season, but he will not be in the saddle in 1939. The Browns' ownership blame poor direction of the club as much as anything else for the miserable failure of the team to climb out of last place. A few pitchers would have helped, of course, but in the main the blame is being traced to Walter Johnson's old batterymate who succeeded Jim Bottomley as manager during midseason last year.

In addition to his lack of pitchers, Gabby boasts neither a capable catcher or an acceptable second baseman. With Beau Bell in a woeful season-long slump, Mel Almada is the only outfielder on the club who looks the part of a big leaguer. But the Browns' errors of commission this season have been overshadowed by their sins of omission.

To hear St. Louis baseball writers tell of it, the Browns' base running has been atrociously atrocious. Runners have been climbing each other's backs in confusion on the baselines, and breaking up rallies which otherwise would have won ball games for the Browns. At one point last week, the Browns' base running was so unpardonably horrible that Street removed himself from the third-base coaching lines and turned the job over to Fred Hoffman, former Yankee catcher. Among other things, Street does not have a favorable press in St. Louis, and the Browns' ownership is casting about for his successor at this writing.

Six Survivors Likely.

There are no jitters among the remander of the league's managers. Their jobs for 1939 appear assured. Even in the face of the startling discharge of Cochrane, who was supposed to be solid at Detroit, there are no qualms or misgivings among those who appear to be the surviving six.

At Detroit, Del Baker has already been given his contract for next season and at Chicago, Jimmy Dykes, despite the dismal showing of his White Sox, is still strongly in the saddle. It is a beautiful friendship between Dykes and Louis Comiskey who swears by the little round man as a swell manager. Comiskey, reared in baseball, and in that respect unlike Owner Briggs in Detroit, appreciates the uncertainties of the game. He has absolved Dykes from blame for the sorry showing of the Sox, taking into consideration the unaccountable hitting slump of Gerald Walker, Luke Appling's broken leg and Monte Stratton's chipped elbow.

At Cleveland, Oscar Vitt is a fixture. Even if his contract did not cover the next two seasons, as it does, Vitt would be a cinch to be back at the helm of the Indians in 1939. He has given Cleveland better baseball than any manager since Tris Speaker and by keeping his Indians up in the race to this point, has sliced more profits into the club's treasury than any previous manager in the club's history. It is already a financial success at Cleveland, and no matter where the club finishes, Vitt will be popular with the owners.

In the East, there is not even a remote chance of a managerial change. At Boston, Joe Cronin is working on the fourth year of his five-year contract and of course will be back at the helm in 1939. But Cronin, like Dykes, has a sympathetic clubowner. Tom Yawkey readily recognizes that Cronin's own sensational play at shortstop has kept the Red Sox within reach of the pennant and he appreciates, too, Cronin's pitching shortage.

Cronin's pitching plight is probably the worst in the league, not excepting Washington's. When Lefty Grove came up with his pulse-less pitching arm, the Red Sox found themselves utterly bereft of reliable pitchers what with Jack Wilson also a pitching cripple. That the Red Sox have been able to maintain third place in the race has been a credit to Cronin's managerial acumen. In Boston, they know that.

Joe McCarthy a Fixture.

We don't know when Joe McCarthy's contract with the Yankees expires, but with the Yankees beginning to make a runaway of the league race, that item is virtually beside the point. The point is that McCarthy has won the pennant for the last two seasons, is well on his way to a third championship, and with Babe Ruth off the club he no longer has to deal with disturbing elements. The job is McCarthy's as long as he wins pennants for Ruppert.

The only manner in which a managerial change could be brought about in Philadelphia would be for Cornelius McGillicuddy to fire Connie Mack. And inasmuch as Connie is the president of the club, that will hardly come to pass until he chooses. There is no indication that Mac, despite his advanced age, is ready to retire as the A's manager. With him, his duties as manager of his club are the very staff of his life.

All of which brings us down to the managerial situation in Washington. Here there is no suspicion that anybody but Stanley Raymond Harris will be on the job when the 1939 season opens. Clark Griffith never fires a manager in midseason and he never hints about his future managerial plans until he is ready to give somebody a contract.

But there is no seeming cause

Bauers Halts Cards, 1 to 0; Gives 2 Hits

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 9.—Russ Baurs, 6 foot 3 inch question mark of the Pirate's pitching staff, put the St. Louis Cardinals through a two-hit wringer today as Pittsburgh's National League leaders squeezed out a 1-to-0 triumph.

Bauers started the winning rally in the third inning off Lefty Roy Henshaw with a single. The pitcher moved to third on Handley's double and scored as Lloyd Waner punched his second single of the day into rightfield. A slingshot throw by Slaughter caught Handley at the plate.

Bauers, the big Wisconsin sophomore who has had an in and out season with seven victories, including today's, and eight defeats, was invincible. Only 31 batters faced him in nine innings, Johnny Mize's single to open the fifth being the first safe hit he allowed.

The only time the big pitcher appeared to be in danger was in the sixth when Terry Moore doubled against the leftfield fence, 365 feet from home plate, with one out. Fast fielding by Johnny Rizzo held Moore at second, but he moved to third on another out, where he was left stranded.

Baurs' last previous start was a week ago at Boston, when he was knocked out in the fifth frame. But one turn ahead of that, at Philadelphia on July 27, he pitched a four-hitter.

The Pirates had trouble on the base paths today, Lloyd Waner getting caught napping off first once and three others were thrown out stealing in addition to Handley being caught at the plate in the third.

This was a great help to Henshaw, who fanned three and permitted only two passes as he kept the Pirates well checked with eight hits.

Sergt. Jasper won the American Legion junior baseball championship yesterday, defeating Costello Post, 9 to 7, in the deciding battle of a three-game playoff series at Griffith Stadium.

Armstrong Is 1-3 Favorite To Beat Lou Ambers Tonight

Public Interest Lags and Advance Sale Shows It—Promoter Will Be Glad if Gate Is $100,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 9.—Lou Ambers or Henry Armstrong? You pay your money and you take your choice.

The spectacular Western Negro and the titleholding "Herkimer Hurricane" are ready to tear into each other at the Polo Grounds tomorrow night, with the lightweight championship of the world at stake.

Armstrong, who has captured the featherweight and welterweight titles within the past nine months, will be shooting for the honor of being the first man in boxing history to wear three world crowns at the same time. He is almost a 1-to-3 shot to make good his threat. However, there is a small, determined group which firmly believes Ambers has the answer to Homicide Henry's challenge.

For a fight in which two champions will be at each other's throats, interest has been at surprisingly low ebb. If the show does $100,000 Promoter Mike Jacobs will be tickled to death.

"We'll have around $40,000 in the iron box tonight," Mike guessed today, "and if the weather man's with us tomorrow we may have a last minute rush that will put us over. I haven't given up. This is a last-minute town."

General belief, however, is that a gate of around $75,000 may be expected. Out-of-town business has been virtually zero.

Betting continued light. Gamblers still rated Armstrong a 5-13 shot to win and 5-8 to stop Ambers.

Although a sturdy little fellow, who can take a punch, is hard to hit, can box and is shifty on his pins, Ambers was not given a chance by experts against the brown whirlwind who has won 35 out of his last 38 bouts by knockouts.

The only fighters able to stay the distance with Armstrong were Aldo Spoldi, the Italian; Baby Arizmendi, the Mexican, and Barney Ross, from whom the Negro won the title last May.

Almost to a man the fight writers favor the Negro to go home with another title in his pocket, but the Ambers supporters, mostly among veteran fight managers, say Lou's stamina and stout heart will enable him to go the distance and perhaps win the decision.

Armstrong has not looked well in training, but his handlers laugh that off, blaming his lackadaisical performances on the heat and to a heavy face guard the Negro was compelled to wear most of the time to protect a cut lip. This, by the way, has entirely mended and neither will have an alibi on physical condition.

Armstrong and Ambers motor in from their New Jersey training camps tomorrow morning to weigh in before the New York State Athletic Commission and receive final physical check-ups.

York's 23d Homer Wins For Bengals

Scores Two Mates to End Pitching Duel and Beat Chisox, 4-1.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 9. — Rudy York's twenty-third homer of the season, coming with two on in the ninth inning, broke up a pitching duel between Jack Knott and Tommy Bridges today and gave the Detroit Tigers a 4-to-1 triumph over Chicago's White Sox.

Until then Knott had allowed the Tigers only two hits. Two errors and Hank Greenberg's single had contributed to a Tiger run in the second, but the Sox tied the score in the fifth on a walk to Joe Kuhel and singles by George Rensa and Marv Owen. The Sox were guilty of three other errors.

Knott allowed four hits in all to eight by Bridges.

Red Sox Swamp Macks, 16-4.

Philadelphia, Aug. 9 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox staged a seven run rally in the seventh inning to win the first game of a series with the Athletics, 16 to 4. Rookie Jim Tabor provided the big blow of the seventh by hitting a home run with the bases filled.

Previous to the blow-off, Nelson Potter had pitched perfect ball for six innings, not allowing a hit or a man to reach base. The A's held a 3 to 0 lead. Bill Harris, 38-year-old recruit from the Buffalo Bisons, went the distance for Boston and was credited with his first American League victory.

Boston, Aug. 9.—Flashing their long dormant fighting spirit, the New York Giants scored three runs in the seventh inning today and beat out the Boston Bees, 5 to 4, in the first game of a three-game series.

Deacon Danny MacFayden, the Bees' starter, suffered his first defeat here this year when he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth after the Giants had won the game in their half of the seventh.

Joe Moore, the Giants' leftfielder, paced the attack with two doubles and a single.

Bill Lohrman, of the Giants, failed to finish, but was credited with his sixth victory of the season when Dick Coffman came in in the seventh and halted the Bees for the remainder of the game.

Lefthander Also Drives In 'Big' Run

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 9.—Broad-shouldered young Kendall Chase, fastballing member of the Nats' pitching staff, laid to with both his arm and his bat this afternoon and checked a Yankee winning streak at five straight.

To say that Chase pitched the Nats to their 4-2 victory is telling only a half-truth. Because it was the young left-hander who went to bat in the ninth inning and struck a single to drive in the winning run, breaking a 2-2 tie.

It was a masterful performance by the reformed milkman, who held the Yankees to six hits in outpitching Spud Chandler. Only once was he in serious trouble with his wildness—in the fourth inning, when he issued three straight walks to give the Yankees a run.

Yankee Steal Foiled.

The only other run scored by the Yankees was similarly the gift of Chase. He unloosed a wild pitch in the sixth inning and enabled a run to score from third base to tie the game at 2-2.

In the eighth inning, the Yankees, nettled by their failure to hit Chase, attempted to score without the aid of a hit. After Gehrig and Selkirk had coaxed walks from Chase with one out, Gordon tried to sacrifice and bunted into a force play. With Gordon on first and Selkirk on third, the Yankees attempted a delayed double steal but Chase wheeled after feinting to throw to second and nipped Selkirk at the plate.

Cecil Travis provided an important blow for the Nats when he led off the ninth with a smartly socked two-bagger to right center. Sammy West sacrificed him to third for the first out, and Buddy Myer was passed. Rick Ferrell could only pop to Crosetti. Then to the surprise of the Nats and Yankees— and probably himself—Chase delivered a single to center that scored Travis. George Case swatted a single to center and Myer scored with the run that gave the Nats a 4-2 lead.

Given that advantage, Chase bore down in the ninth. Pinch Hitter Charley Ruffing was disposed of on a grounder to Travis, and Crosetti grounded to Lewis. Rolfe drew a walk but Chase had his victory when Hoag grounded to Myer.

Bonura Scores Lewis.

The Nats knocked Chandler loose from a run in the first inning when Buddy Lewis singled to right, took second on an infield out and crossed the plate on Zeke Bonura's hot single to left.

The Yankees caught up with Chase in the fourth without the aid of a hit. With one out, he walked DiMaggio, Gehrig and Selkirk in succession and DiMaggio scored while Gordon was grounding out. Chase held that rally to a single run when he forced Glenn to hit into a force play.

Wild Pitch Aids Yankees.

On one hit, the Yankees came up with the tying run in the same inning. With two out, Gordon and Glenn singled to left and when Chase loosed a wild pitch with Pitcher Chandler at bat, Gordon scored from third.

But from that point, Chase was the master. In the last three innings, he allowed the Yankees only one hit. In the eighth he held 'em hitless and in the ninth after the Nats had stepped out in front, he protected his advantage by the simple expedient of allowing no more hits.

Elated by the success of Chase against the Yankees, Manager Bucky Harris tonight announced that his other lefthander, Elon Hogsett, would be sent to the mound tomorrow. Hogsett will probably have Monte Pearson as his pitching opponent.

Today was the Nats' third victory over the Yankees in ten games this season. It was their second triumph of the year in Yankee Stadium.

Long Key and McLin Are Favored in Hambletonian Today

10 Topnotch 3-Year-Olds Are Entered

By the Associated Press.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The names of ten of trotting's finest 3-year-olds were dropped into the entry box today, setting the stage for the renewal of the Hambletonian, richest of all light harness horse racing stakes.

The eight colts and two fillies, survivors of a list of 259 nominated as yearlings, will settle their argument tomorrow in two-out-of-three heats at Good Time Park with the division of $37,962, depending on the outcome. To the winner will go approximately $19,000.

Two colts that showed little as 2-year-olds are favored. As the advance guard of an expected crowd of 40,000 poured into this little Orange County capital, Long Key, owned by E. J. Merkle, of Columbus, Ohio, was made the 8-to-5 choice. Two-to-one was quoted against McLin, bred by W. H. Cane, promoter of the race, and sold ten days ago to Lawrence B. Sheppard, of the Hanover, Pa., Shoe Farms for $20,000.

Record Good.

Long Key, a son of Peter Volo out of Iosola's Worthy, herself winner of the 1927 Hambletonian, was not even considered a first-flight juvenile. However, his record this season includes victories in the championship stallion stakes at Cleveland and the American at Agawam. He stepped one heat of the Stallion in 2:01 1-2, the same time made by Shirley Hanover in creating a Hambletonian record last year.

McLin showed even less as a 2-year-old. He started in five races and finished last each time. This year, however, he burned up the track in trials and then beat Long Key in one heat of the American.

If the favorites are beaten, the odds indicate it will be either by J. J. McIntyre's Earl's Mr. Will or The Duchess, first foreign-owned horse ever entered in the buggy whip derby. Each was quoted at 8 to 1. The Duchess is owned by Count Mangelli, of Milan.

The others, including Elbridge T. Gerry's Dale Hanover, champion juvenile of 1937, are given only outside chances. Dale, although completely recovered from an early season leg injury, is rated a 15-to-1 shot. Prohibitor, owned by E. Roland Harriman, Gerry's uncle, is even longer at 20 to 1.

Gets Rail Position.

Professor, another outsider owned by Mark Kyler, of North Tonawanda, N. Y., received the favored rail position for the first heat. After that they will line up according to the way they finish the opening mile.

Homer Biery's Royal Spencer received plenty of vocal, if not financial support from Butler (Pa.) friends of his owner. Twenty-eight of them wearing linen dusters labeled "Biery's Butler Boosters," loudly proclaimed the merits of Spencer. Yet the bookmakers held the colt steady at 15 to 1.

McMillin Chosen All-Stars' Coach For Redskin Tilt

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—Alvin "Bo" McMillin, of Indiana University, one of football's most distinguished figures, is the people's choice to direct the Collegiate All-Stars against the Washington Redskins, champions of the National Professional League, in the fifth annual charity game at Soldier Field the night of August 31.

The game annually attracts an attendance of more than 80,000.

McMillin's assistants will be Harry Kipke, former head coach at Michigan; Raymond "Ducky" Pond, of Yale; Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame, and A. J. Robertson, of Bradley Tech, who finished in the order named.

These gridiron leaders won their places in the greatest popularity contest in the history of the sport. A total of 16,451,409 first-place votes were cast in the poll, conducted by the Chicago Tribune and 150 associated newspapers. McMillin drew 4,982,478. Last year's contest polled 6,844,872 first-place votes.

Mamakos-Abrams Fight Victor Will Get Chance at Glen Lee

High-Ranking Middleweight Will Be a Test for Either of Local Boys—Overlin May Come In.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Thrusting out his chest-tummy (there is no visible line of demarcation) in the manner of a pouter pigeon strutting before the lady of his affections, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn last night announctd that Glen Lee or Ken Overlin will meet the winner of Monday night's Steve Mamakos-George Abrams bout at the ball park.

The Washington fight-arranger is in position to sign both but wants to pit Lee against Mamakos in the event that he lives up to his prefight boasts and mangles Abrams' features so that even his own manager won't recognize him. If Abrams repeats his victory over the Greek and slices him up like lean strips of liver while accomplishing the feat, Ahearn wants to import Overlin. Paired in this manner he thinks either bout would attract serious sugar at the box office.

A self-styled Nebraska Wildcat, Lee has lived up to his sobriquet in every way humanly possible. He doesn't bark or growl in the ring, but apes the wildcat in every other way. He enjoys a reputation in the upper strata of fistiana similar to the one owned by Mamakos locally, viz, nobody yet has succeeded in knocking him out and after he takes their broadsides he grins and starts punching back.

His two battles with Fred Apostoli, uncrowned middleweight champion, were thrillers that would have put the old Western movie serials to shame for sheer excitement. These were merely socking sessions in which Apostoli hit Lee with everything but Gen. Phelan's toupe, and almost collapsed from exhaustion when Lee took it without a backward step. Apostoli fared better in the second bout, but still had stormy sailing.

Lee is supposed to weigh in the neighborhood of 155 pounds, which, if correct, wouldn't be too much for Mamakos. He has fought big middleweights but only because he couldn't find anybody his size to quarrel with, and because he has no qualms about giving away weight. Mamakos will be right in class on that score, because the Greek will take 'em from 100 to 200 pounds.

Overlin, reigning Southern middleweight champion—with a belt to prove it, and former All-Navy middleweight champion, would be an odds-on favorite over Abrams largely because of his experience. He returned from an Australian invasion yesterday, docking at San Francisco, and will remain on the Coast until instructions are received from Manager Chris Dundee.

Dundee, meanwhile, stopped over in Washington yesterday en route from Chicago to Richmond where Norment Quarles boxes Lloyd Pine tonight, and tentatively closed the Overlin-Abrams match with Ahearn.

The Savoy A. C. knocked the Tivoli softballers out of the leadership of the Fourteenth Street Businessmen's League yesterday by winning, 11 to 1. The Savoy team sent in Miss "Millie" Carter, who held the Tivoli boys to 5 hits and one run, while her teammates made 14 hits and 11 runs.

Miss Carter pitched scoreless ball until the last inning, when Tivoli scored their only run. By virtue of their win, the Savoys went into second place in the league.

Girls Swim Meet Staged

McKinley and Takoma Pools Are Scenes.

The sectional swimming meets for girls were resumed yesterday before enthusiastic gatherings at the McKinley and Takoma pools. As in the meets held last week at the Georgetown and Rosedale pools, the novelty races, such as the balloon race and fan race, proved to be the most popular with the crowd and contestants.

The feature races at both pools were the 25-yard free style events for girls 17 years old and over. Eleanor Fuller was the winner of this event at the Takoma Pool, while Mary Zanelitti took first honors at the McKinley pool.

Miss Zanelitti, who represented New York Avenue, was closely pushed in this race by Jean Hall and Dora Poyner, the latter two representing McKinley. Miss Zanelitti also won the feet tied race.

The meets were supervised by Miss Maude N. Parker, of the Department of Playgrounds. Sectional meets will be held at Anacostia Thursday and at East Potomac Friday.

Cochrane Waived Half of Contract

Detroit, Aug. 9 (AP).—Walter O. Briggs, jr., treasurer of the Detroit Baseball Club, confirmed today the statement of Mickey Cochrane, deposed Tiger manager, that Cochrane's two-year contract had been abrogated by mutual consent, and disclosed that Cochrane's salary had been $36,000 a year.

Cochrane's salary as manager and vice president of the club, known to be one of the highest in baseball, had been reported as high as $45,000.

"It was a regular player's contract," Briggs said, "and Mickey himself canceled the second year by asking dad if he would pay the salary up to the end of 1938. Dad said 'certainly,' and that's all there was to it."

Patty Berg Enjoys Huge Lead In Women's Western Golf Play

Minneapolis Girl Maintains Sub-Par Pace With Four-Under-Par Performance Yesterday.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, nipped at the wire for three years in a row, went "to the whip" in the Women's Western medal play golf derby at Butterfield Country Club today.

The freckle-faced, chubby Minnesota star, runner-up in the event to Miss Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., from 1935 through 1937, held a 36-hole total of 151 strokes in the longest medal play tournament sanctioned for women. With 36 holes to go she was a standout favorite to down the jinx held over her by the Lexington player, who finished today's second round 10 shots off Miss Berg's blistering halfway pace.

The pace-maker, in taking a seven-stroke lead on her closest rival, Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, maintained the sub-par pace she opened with Monday, when she carded a sensational seven-under-par 73 for a tournament record. Today, Miss Berg toured the out 9 in 37, 4 under par. She slipped 2 shots over par coming home, winding up with a 41 for a 2-under-par 78.

Going out, Miss Berg birdied the first, third, sixth and eighth holes, never slipping over par. She was slightly wild off the tee on the inward jaunt, however, and lost a stroke to par on the final green by three-putting.

Miss Williams had nines of 41, 39—even par, for a 36-hole aggregate of 158, a stroke margin on the Kansas City veteran, Mrs. Opal S. Hill, who went out in 42, but clipped two strokes off par coming in with a fine 37. In fourth place at 160 strokes was Edith Estabrooks, of Dubuque, Iowa, who had a second round 37, 44—81.

Miss Miley, who won her third straight title last year with a tournament record of 309, eight shots under Miss Berg, had a 79 today for a 36-hole aggregate of 161, the same total as held by Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, who added a 79 today to her first round 82.

Mrs. H. Austin Pardue, Minneapolis, had a 164 total, a shot under the aggregate of Miss Dorothy Traung, San Francisco star.

At the 36-hole point a year ago Miss Miley, daughter of a Lexington professional, had a total of 154 strokes to 157 for Miss Berg. Eighteen holes will be played tomorrow, with the final 18 Thursday.

Nolan Selects Team To Play in Richmond

Strong Golfing Aggregation to Meet Country Club of Virginia Players Sunday.

M. Parker Nolan, captain of Congressional's Maryland State Championship team, announced the line-up yesterday for Sunday's encounter with the Country Club of Virginia over the James River Course.

The star-studded Congressional team, one of the strongest among the local clubs in recent years, was undefeated last year and won the State team championship by an impressive margin. The encounter will be their first of the year. The hosts are recognized as the strongest team in Virginia.

Billy Shea, District amateur champion, and his Georgetown teammate, Billy Dettweiler, will play as the No. 2 duo with Claude Rippy, three-time public links champion and Chevy Chase Invitation champion, pairing with the southpaw ace, Earl McAleer, in the next foursome.

Club champion, Dr. Howard L. Smith, will pair with the former Texas star, Gene Pittman, while Louis Fuchs and Frank Goodwin will pair as the fifth team and L. J. Bernard and R. J. Holland, the latter one of the most improved players at the club, will round out the 12-man team.

The line-up will vary from one that won the State title last year, with Roland MacKenzie, former professional; Roger Peacock and Jack McCarron missing from the line-up, while Cox, McAleer and Fuchs are newcomers.

BEAVER DAM.

Cliff Spencer has carded another of the popular goofy tournaments for the Beaver Dam Club members on Sunday, a mixed Scotch foursome affair. Contestants must play in costume and will play with one club of their own selection and a putter. Prizes will be awarded for the outfits, low net and low gross.

A pro-amateur, sweepstakes and amateur handicap tourney is carded over the Woodholme course today, in Pikesville, another scheduled event of the Maryland State Golf Association.

Each professional will be allowed three amateur partners, with the simon-pures receiving half handicap allowance. The entry fee is $2 for the pros and $1 for the amateurs.

The amateurs will also play in a handicap tourney, with low net and gross prizes awarded. Entrance fee for this event is $1, while the pro sweepstakes fee has been upped to $2. All participants must have M. S. G. A. handicap card.

The association has a handicap event scheduled over the Cumberland Country Club course on Sunday, August 14, for amateurs.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Handcuff, one of the bargains to come out of the C. V. Whitney sale last fall, today staked her claim to the 3-year-old filly championship of 1938 with a convincing victory in the fifty-ninth Alabama Stakes of a mile and a quarter, decide over a muddy track.

Carrying equal topweight of 125 pounds with Creole Maid, the brown daughter of Whichone-Tenez staged one of her characteristic stretch rushes on the outside to triumph by two lengths in 2:07 2-5.

Nydrie Stable's Black Wave, recent winner of the Test Stakes, in which Handcuff finished sixth, was second in the role of an 11 to 5 choice. William Woodward's Anaflame, fourth in the Kenner, was headed out of the place while beating Roseretter by a wide margin for the show.

Handcuff, which cost Mrs. Sloane $12,700, picked up $8,275 today making her earnings for the year total $26,050. She has won three of her eight starts, including triumphs in the Delaware Oaks and the Acorn Stakes. As a juvenile, Handcuff, won $7,340.

Behind Roseretter and in order came Creole Maid, which won the Coaching Club American Oaks for Mrs. W. M. Jeffords; Autumnquest, Gulf Breeze and May R.

Creole Maid made the running to the top of the stretch. She disposed of Gulf Breeze, a maiden, in the first quarter mile, then had Anaflame as her chief rival until the last turn. Black Wave was kept in close attendance from the start.

Handcuff, after breaking well, dropped back until she had only Roseretter headed. Jack Westrope gradually improved the Brookmeade filly's position. He reached contention rounding out of the backstretch and sent his mount up fast on the outside of the leaders entering the home lane. Handcuff spurted to the front entering the last furlong and drew away. Anaflame swerved in the drive home and bothered Black Wave, but Handcuff was clearly best.

Trouper Captures Whitman Purse.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 9.—Despite the fact that his trainer, O. L. Foster, wanted to scratch him because of the heavy track, Mrs. E. R. Smith's Trouper today found enough good going on the outside to win the Whitman Purse, mile and a sixteenth feature at Narragansett Park, and pay $14.10.

W. E. Boeing's Galsun was second, a length behind Trouper, and paid $2.60 to place. Two lengths away was Mrs. E. Denemark's Uneasy, that paid $3.10 to show while finishing a half length in front of H. Phillip's Scrooge.

The winner was timed in 1:52.1 and was scoring his fourth victory in 23 starts this year.

Before entering the winner's circle, Trouper had to contest for the early lead with Scrooge, and when he overpowered that horse, Galsun challenged out of the ruck of the field and only a strong finish by Harry Krovitz assured victory for Trouper in the final drive to the wire.

Uneasy broke out of the gate first, but going into the clubhouse turn it was Scrooge that showed the way to the field. Not for long, however, as Krovitz made a challenge with Trouper and went to the front on the elbow of the turn into the backstretch.

Bobby Beats ChetMurphy After Battle

Chicagoan Turns on Heat in Third Set; Mako, Parker Also Win.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Bobby Riggs, Chicago's top-flight entertainer of the tennis courts, led the men's field into the second round of the Eastern Grass Courts championship at the Westchester Country Club today by beating out Chester Murphy, a fellow townsman, 6—2, 2—6, 7—5.

Playing carelessly and clowning as he often does in the early rounds, Riggs trailed 1—4 in the final set. It looked as if he might be in trouble since Murphy, one of the University of Chicago twins, was good enough to reach the semifinals of the National Intercollegiates this year.

Bobby sauntered over to a field box, grinned at a friend, and said, "He's got me—I'm all through." Then he unleashed his heavy artillery and bewildered Murphy with drop shots and drives that defied return.

A stunning upset, which sent Sidney B. Wood, of New York, former Davis Cup player and an outstanding candidate for this year's cup team, to the sidelines marked the completion of the first round.

Playing late in the afternoon on a court made slippery by four days of intermittent rains, Wood was beaten, 6—4, 2—6, 8—6, by Leonard Hartman, veteran New York player. Wood was the seventh seeded player in the men's singles tourney.

Parker Wins.

Others to reach the second round included Frank Parker, of Hollywood, Calif.; Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, seeded second, fourth and eighth, respectively. Parker and Allison played out matches that were interrupted by rain yesterday, the former taking three games from Marvin Wachman, of Chicago, to win, 6—0, 7—5, and the latter playing a single game to defeat William Robertson, of San Marino, Calif., 8—6, 7—5.

Mako, making his first appearance since his return from a European tour with Don Budge, won from John Foreman, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 6—1, 6—2. He was bothered by the chopped-up and sodden turf and forced to resort to his incomparable volleying game which Foreman couldn't match.

Hare, Hunt Advance.

Charles E. Hare, former British Davis Cup player, took two love sets from Chauncey Depew Steele, of New York. Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, ranked No. 5 nationally, skidded around the court to a 6—2, 6—1, triumph over C. A. Farrar, of White Plains, N. Y. The second-seeded foreigner, William Freisenbruch, of Bermuda, lost to William Talbert, of Cincinnati, 6—2, 6—3.

The women's play was featured by a two-hour match in which Barbara Winslow, of Hollywood, Calif., last week's winner of the East Hampton tournament, defeated Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3. The third-round victory sent Miss Winslow into the quarter finals, where she will meet top-seeded Alice Marble.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Cambridge, Mass., seeded third, reached the third round by defeating Theodosia Smith, of Pasadena, Calif., 6—0, 6—1. Mrs. John Van Ryn of Austin, Tex., joined her after beating Marilyn McRae, of Little Rock, Ark., 2—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Redskins to Open Grid Training at Ballston Stadium Today

The shrill wheeze of a coach's whistle will signal the end of vacation and the re-opening of training school this morning for 40-odd professional football players, known to the trade as the Washington Redskins.

On the fallow soil of a Ballston field, a couple of good punts from Washington, the 1937 champions will plunge into the task of re-building their entire offensive in time for the All-Star game at Chicago, August 31, which annually heralds the coming of the professional grid season.

The whistle that summons the idle huskies to work will be wielded by a florid, freckle-faced Irishman, Coach Ray Flaherty, who has never failed to land his club on top in its own division. Flaherty is no Gloomy Gil Doble and not given to worrying needlessly about his problems, but he has good cause for the worried expression he wears as they assemble for their first drill.

Cliff Battles, the best running back in the backfield last season, has reverted to collegiate football as assistant coach at Columbia, and his football brogans are, figuratively speaking, size 24. Flaherty doesn't know where to begin looking for a successor, but he must find one. Andy Farkas, George Karamatic and one or two others have been mentioned as candidates for the post, and Flaherty is confident he'll develop a good man for the position—but getting one of Battles' ability is a horse of an entirely different hue.

Flaherty also is looking for a new center, to replace George Smith, and a pair of reserve ends who can be inserted in the line-up at any time without slowing up the offensive works. Nor is his line as stable as it might be, for the serious Irishman is satisfied that his forward wall is going to be up against a tougher assignment in this All-Star game than it will meet the remainder of the season.

Sammy Baugh, brilliant passing ace and spearhead of the team's victorious drive last season, will not report with the first batch of players at 9:30 o'clock this morning as he missed his plane out of Dallas, Tex., yesterday, and will not arrive until late afternoon today. Neither will Andy Farkas, who was selected on the All-Star eleven and will oppose his future teammates at Chicago, nor Eddie Britt. Britt, a seasoned half back, informed Redskin headquarters that he has been ailing and will be a few days late reporting.

"Wee Willie" Wilkin, the Douglas Corrigan of the bus lines, heads an imposing list of recruits scheduled to report. Wilkin has been handcuffed to Flaherty since arriving—one day late—Monday afternoon and is certain to be on time this morning. Maurice (Red) Elder, Mickey Parks, "Jackrabbit" Abbitt and four boys who learned their football in District schools are included on the list ordered to report.

The four are Pat Brady and Clem Stralka, of Georgetown; Joe Anthonavage, of Catholic University, and Jay Turner, of George Washington. All but Turner are linemen.

D.C. Printers In 2d Round

Defeat Pittsburgh in Annual Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 9.—Pittsburgh and Indianapolis were eliminated today in the Union Printers International Baseball Tournament here, the first causalities of the week-long meet.

Washington piled up a 14-to-1 lead before Pittsburgh withdrew at the end of the fifth inning of play.

Detroit overcame a 5-to-1 advantage to send Indianapolis out of the meet with an 11 to 7 victory. Two defeats eliminate a team.

St. Louis and Baltimore won their second straight games today, while Cincinnati, New York, Twin Cities, Washington, Detroit and Chicago have each wone one and lost one.

St. Louis put across one run in the ninth to beat Cincinnati, 9 to 8, after a four-run rally by the Ohio team in the eighth had tied the count.

Baltimore nosed out New York, 10 to 9, in the eleventh inning, after both teams scored twice in the ninth to maintain a deadlock.

Felt, of Chicago, held the Minneapolis-St. Paul aggregation to two hits for a 2-to-0-victory.

N. B. A. Says Welter Title's on the Line.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 9 (AP).—Edward C. Foster, executive secretary of the National Boxing Association, said today that the National Boxing Association would recognize the winner of tomorrow night's Henry Armstrong-Lou Ambers fight as the welterweight as well as the lightweight champion of the world.

"Because," Foster said, "the bout is scheduled for 15 rounds and I can't see wherein there can be any argument about Armstrong's welterweight championship being at stake. Certainly if Ambers is the winner the National Boxing Association will recognize him as the titleholder in the 147-pound class."

Lee Drops Unpopular Decision to Belloise

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Mike Belloise, once recognized in New York State as featherweight champion, won an unpopular eight-round decision over Paul Lee, of Washington, D. C., at Dyckman Oval tonight. Each won four rounds, but Belloise rallied strongly in the last two frames to gain the edge. Lee was the aggressor through most of the bout. Belloise weighed 129¾ and Lee 126¼.

Last season Slingin' Sammy Baugh led the throwers but Gaynell Tinsley, Cardinal end, caught the most passes . . . Speaking of passers, Arnold Herber, of Green Bay, has gained 4,378 yards (almost 3 miles) on his tosses since 1932 . . . This is almost half again further than Cliff Battles' National League record of 3,398 yards in carrying the ball for the same period of years . . . Note to Bill Terry—The Pirates, as you have said, may not have the pitching to win the N. L. pennant but they sure punched plenty of holes in your Meal Ticket . . .

Unless he can step up his present pace, Lou Gehrig is apparently doomed to the worst season of his major league career . . . With two-thirds of the games behind him, the Iron Horse is not hitting .300 and has hit only 18 home runs . . . 1929 was Gehrig's most dismal offensive season, but at that he batted an even .300, smacked 35 homers and drove in 126 runs . . . Ernie Lombardi, Reds catcher, has replaced Gabby Hartnett as the National League's "Flatfoot Floogie" . . . In Brooklyn the other day, the ponderous catcher singled off a fence 365 feet from home plate and was thrown out trying to stretch his hit into a double . . . Charlie Grimm, former manager of the Cubs, had to learn how to keep score when he took up his duties as baseball commentator for Station WBBM, Chicago . . . Before he was scheduled to report his first game, Charley is said to have practiced scoring for three hours in his hotel room . . . Here's one Ripley missed . . . In a Kitty League game at Fulton recently the Paducah Indians batted completely around, yet not one of them hit a ball into fair territory . . . Fulton pitchers gave up six bases on balls and struck out three batsmen in a wild inning which saw seven runs scored . . .

And just ten years ago today . . . Al Simmons, American League's leading hitter, slammed a homer with the bases full to give the Athletics a 8-3 victory over the Nats . . . Bob Considine and Dooley Mitchell, Washington's only two entries in the National Public Parks Tennis Tourney, were eliminated in the quarter-final singles round . . . Tom McNamara, G. U. grid star in 1917, was named Hoya backeld coach by Lou Little . . .

McPhail Resents Harridge's Blast Against Babe Ruth

New York, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Larry S. MacPhail, executive vice president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, went to bat for Babe Ruth tonight against "thinly veiled cracks" by William Harridge, president of the American League.

Harridge, in an interview with George Kirksey, of the United Press, in Chicago, said the American League will stick to the main show, giving the fans successful high-grade baseball without any sideshow or hoopla stuff. He said the yellow ball, night baseball, footraces and ballyhoo men for coaches, aren't yet necessary to the success of the junior circuit.

MacPhail, who has been attempting to pump new life into the Dodgers through such means, said: "This is a free country and Mr. Harridge is entitled to blast night baseball and the yellow ball if he so desires.

"I resent, however, the thinly veiled cracks about Babe Ruth, our coach. Mr. Harridge may consider Ruth a 'Ballyhoo Man.' In any event, Mr. Harridge could not find a place for him in the American League. Ruth has made a valuable contribution to the spirit and morale of our club. He has worked in harmony with Burleigh Grimes (manager), Tom Sheehan (a coach), and Lee Durocher (team captain), and he has been an inspiration to the younger players. There will be a place for Babe in our organization just as long as he desires to remain with us.

"Harridge's slur at Ruth—coming from a head of an organization that has ballyhooed clowns like Nick Altrock and Al Schacht for years and directed at a man who did as much for the American League and baseball as did George Herman Ruth—is the essence of bad taste and punk sportsmanship."

Olson Wants Dusek Next

Ernie Promised Him by Local Promoter.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Cliff Olson, that widely disliked miscreant of the mat, has informed Promoter Joe Turner that he wants no less than Ernie Dusek for an opponent after he pins Paul Boesch tomorrow night on Mr. Griffith's green sward. And the closely cropped Swede spoke in a manner that left no doubt of his sincerity, according to Turner, who listened with his very own ears.

Hollering into a telephone from New York, Olson told the Washington promoter he will not wrestle Boesch unless it is agreed that he gets a return shot at Ernie. After that he wants Emil Dusek—and after that Benny Bortnick, the referee.

"And after that," wryly remarked Turner, "he'll want the deed to my house, the Arena, and a $10 loan. But I'll try to get the Duseks for him. I've been trying to co-operate with the "prevent accidents" drive now in progress, but when you get a jay-walker like this you can't feaze him with a fast steam-roller. All I can say is go ahead, and good luck!"

The Swedish strangler, peanut vender, etc., etc., insisted Bortnick was partial to the Duseks because they patronized his watermelon and sea food establishment, while Cliff insisted on eating at another hash house. This unfair attitude on the portly umpire's part, he contends, resulted in a quick count for Ernie Dusek in their match here several weeks ago in which Olson was counted out in record time.

Turner has forwarded this protest to the Geological Survey for arbitration. The department has appointed a committee from the tides and tables section to act on the matter.

Meanwhile plans for tomorrow night's grabfest have been completed down to selling the tickets. Abie Coleman and Emile Dusek tangle in the other half of a double-windup, which promises to be hot and lively.

One of the evening's biggest features will be a battle royal between Bibber McCoy, Thor Johnson, Slim Zimbleman, Ed Kibbons, Mike Mazurki and Ed White. The two survivors will wrestle to a fall, and Turner has added an innovation by announcing that the first two to topple from the ring will return to the ring and wrestle in a consolation bout. All in all it adds up to a lot of wrestling.

In the event of threatening weather the entire show will be the arena.

Ouch! Another One Of Those Marathoners!

Caledonia, Pa., Aug. 9 (AP).—A 22-year-old caddy played 196 holes of golf in 14 hours and 52 minutes—dawn to dark—today and was only over 90 once. He used but one ball.

Prompted by the recent day's work of 144 holes by J. Smith Ferebee, Chicago broker, Carlton Brown started over the hilly Caledonia park course at daybreak. Darkness halted him on the sixteenth green of his eleventh round.

Late Rallies Overcome Fall In Grain Prices

Wheat, Corn, Rye and Oats Advance in Chicago Market.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—Late advances of 1⅛ cents in Chicago wheat prices today more than overcame fractional early dips to fresh five-year low price records. Corn, rye and oats scored gains, too, after touching similar new bottoms.

Reports of rains interfering with the Canadian harvest and tending to increase rust damage acted as a stimulus for upturns, together with word that Europe's corn crop was suffering from heat and drougnt.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¼-⅜ higher compared with yesterday's finish, September 63⅛@63¼, December 65⅛@65¼, corn ⅞-1⅜ up, September 51@51⅛, December 48¾@49; oats ¼-⅜ advanced, rye showing ⅝ to 1 cent bulge, and provisions varying from 50 cents setback to a jump of 10 cents.

Family Income 22 Per Cent Under Year Ago

Minneapolis, Aug. 9.—The "real income" of the average family in June, despite the budding business revival, was 1 cent on the dollar less than in May and 22 cents on the dollar lower than in June, 1937, according to a monthly study of what people get and spend, made public here today by Investors Syndicate.

The decline in cash income in June was 1 cent on the dollar from that of May. Cash outgo remained unchanged. June cash income was down 20 cents on the dollar from the same month of a year ago. Cash outgo, or living expenses, were down only 4 cents from June, 1937.

"Just as general consuming capacity experienced no real drop until after the peak of business activity had been passed last year," the consumers' study explains, 'budding revival may not be quickly reflected in increased ability of consumers to buy goods and services.

"Within a year, June, 1938, to June, 1937, the amount of cash received by the typical American household has declined 25 cents on the dollar. Where a dollar was being received in wages then, only 65 cents is received now. The salary dollar at the end of June, compared with the same time a year ago, was 83 cents, the dollar from investments had become 77 cents and the dollar from other income sources, such as farm income and royalties, had become 89 cents. If a composite consumer, deriving income from all sources in proportion to the national average, could be imagined, for every dollar flowing to him in June, 1933, only 75 cents trickled into his pockets in June, 1938.

"This typical consumer, however, continued to gain benefits from dropping prices which give his fewer dollars greater value in relation to the articles and services he must buy.

Cotton Steady; December 8.35

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Early losses in cotton today were later recovered on trade buying and covering. December sold up from 8.25 to 8.36 and closed at 8.35, with final prices unchanged to 2 points net lower.

The market opened 6 to 8 points lower due to the disappointing action of Liverpool and Bombay and selling from these sources on a bearish interpretation of yesterday's American crop estimate. With little domestic selling and with hedge selling light, the offerings were soon absorbed by trade price fixing. Continued hesitancy to press the market was attributed to the stabilizing influence of a possible cotton loan by the Commodity Credit Corporation should prices in the South ease a few points further.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil regained early declines today to close with little net change. Easiness of cotton accounted for local selling, which carried the market off 6 to 8 points, but prices later rallied with lard. Closing prices were 1 point net lower to 1 higher on sales of 152 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; September closed 8.30, October 8.25, December 8.24, January 8.26, March 8.29.

I. C. C. Recommends Railroad Merger

An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner recommended yesterday consolidation of the Denver & Rio Grande Western and four affiliated railroads for unified operation and management. The affiliated companies are the Denver & Salt Lake Western, the Denver & Salt Lake Railway, the Rio Grande Junction Railway and the Goshen Valley Railroad.

The Denver & Rio Grande Western and the Denver & Salt Lake Western are being reorganized under section 77 of the bankruptcy act. The consolidation of the five railroads would be in line with the commission's plan for grouping the Nation's carriers.

13 Mortgage Companies Take Step to Retire Debentures.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Aug. 9.—One of the largest real estate bond liquidation plans of recent years was announced today when holders of $23,800,000 of debentures of 13 mortgage companies were asked to submit tenders on their holdings before September 9. The tenders have been requested from more than 10,000 known holders in all parts of the country, by the respective debtor corporations and by Maryland Casualty Co., which is the guarantor of interest, but not of principal, on the issues.

The debentures were issued in 1934 under a mortgage refunding plan in part exchange for the defaulted mortgage bonds of predecessor companies. The call now being issued for tenders of the debentures, which is an important step toward final liquidation of the 13 corporations, contemplates the repurchase and cancellation of debentures through application of the proceeds from sale of real estate and mortgages now held by the 13 companies.

J. G. White & Co., Inc., of New York, and Baker, Watts & Co., Stein Bros. & Boyce and Colonial Bond & Share Corporation, all of Baltimore, will act as agents to receive tenders from debenture holders, which must be received before September 9.

Oil Supplies Drop 6,962,000 Barrels

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday that stocks of crude and refined oil totaled 588,507,000 barrels in June, a decrease of 6,962,000 compared with May stocks of 590,469,000. June supplies, however, showed an increase of 32,822,000 barrels over stocks of 550,685,000 for the same month last year.

Stocks of motor fuel, including finished and unfinished gasoline, totaled 87,482,000 barrels, a decrease of 7,213,000 under May stocks of 94,695,000. June production of crude oil declined to a daily average of 3,139,200 barrels compared with 3,183,000 in May and 3,527,100 in June last year.

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Closing Prices Are Irregular as Wall Street Awaits Foreign and Domestic Development.

New York, Aug. 9.—Irregularity continued in the stock market today as traders sat back to read the latest military communiques from the East and West and to scan the home news for some indication of business progress. The sum total derived from such perusals was near enough to zero to be without influence on prices. Consequently a small amount of selling carried the big board list to a slightly lower level.

Judged by the composite average, there was a decline of 0.38 point, with all groups except rails contributing. Trading fell away to only 829,750 shares, which indicates that there is no rush to switch from one side of the market to the other. The low volume is disappointing the brokerage fraternity and judging from the comments of traders there is no immediate prospect of a change in their waiting attitude, barring some unforeseen development.

Another new low for sterling was listed in the day's disturbing factors as the rush of hoarders into gold continued. Operations in the foreign exchange market today revealed that in addition to heavy purchases of gold by the holders of foreign moneys there is developing another rush into dollars. This was reflected in the purchase of $6,586,000 of gold in London today for shipment to New York, the largest shipment in recent months and nearly as much as has been shipped here from London since the present move started on July 26. Gold offered in London amounted to $11,504,000 and the price set for the day has not been exceeded since November 9, 1936.

General Motors Gains.

While the stock market worked lower, several speculative leaders managed to recover early losses and close with modest upturns. General Motors, again the day's most active stock, added a half point and there was heavy trading in United States Rubber, which ended the day plus 1⅝. There was little change in Chrysler and Yellow Truck. Bendix led the aviation division and among the rails there was good volume and firm tone in both New York Central and Delaware & Hudson.

Radio was lower on the revelation that Atlas Corporation had chosen not to exercise its option to purchase part of Radio's holdings in R. K. O. The deal may be reopened, as the objection of the Atlas officials was purely one of price, but the old deal is now abandoned. DuPont failed to move along with General Motors, closing off a point and losses of a point or more were sustained by such leaders as Westinghouse, American Can, Standard of New Jersey, Allied Chemical and Peoples Gas.

Implement Shares.

Agricultural implement shares were not helped by the rebound of wheat from new five-year lows. International Harvester was down about a point while Case gave up 3 points. There were small losses in General Electric, Sears, Nickel and Telephone.

A feature of the upside was the preferred of United States Rubber which moved sharply against the trend, closing up 4½ points and making a new high for the year. Also at a new high was Industrial Rayon, which announced improved business during July.

The grain markets furnished better news than did securities. While wheat sank fractionally to new five-year lows, there was a recovery which more than eliminated these losses on reports that rains were hampering the Canadian harvest, and were increasing the danger of rust damage. Cotton closed unchanged to off 2 points, moving within a narrow range as traders contemplated the possibility of a new Government loan on this staple.

Speculative listed bonds moved lower in a dull market today, while high-grade money-market bonds held to former levels. The decline in most equities helped to unsettle the bond market, but plans of a few borderline rails to press for extensions on funded debt service pay played an equally great part. The more vulnerable rails showed losses to 3 points. United States Treasury bonds advanced slightly, despite seasonal talk of quarter-date financing possibilities. Foreign dollar issues were quiet and irregular. Turnover was $5,440,000.

Bonds of the Baltimore & Ohio and Lehigh Valley systems were unsettled throughout the session, owing to the deferred interest proposals. The weakness was fairly general, however, and extended even to some fairly high grades, as well as to default carrier issues. Local tractions had a sinking spell, while communications bonds were mixed. Holding company bonds, commodity issues and other special groups showed more losses than gains.

United States Treasury long-term bonds were 1-32 to 5-32 point higher, and small gains also were recorded in guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations. In counter trading keen demand for "rights" sprang up, on talk of September financing by the Treasury. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were maintained in the high grade section, while the new offerings of the week were awaited.

Japanese bonds moved irregularly lower in the foreign section, Ujigawa Power 7s being a conspicuous exception owing to sinking fund buying. Italian bonds were dull, while European default bonds merely held to previous figures. The Latin-American group attracted occasional interest, but most movements were small. Highest grade foreigns were quiet and well maintained.

Building Rises to Top Volume For This Year

But High Costs and Lower Rents Are Obstacles to Expansion.

New York, Aug. 9.—The rise in building contracts in the field of private enterprise in May was extended moderately in June, with the result that contracts reached the highest volume this year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. As in May, the rise in June was contrary to the usual seasonal trend. Contracts in June were 4 per cent larger than in May as compared with an average decrease of 3.3 per cent from May to June in the preceding 13 years. Both residential and nonresidential contracts rose in June to new highs for 1938.

The expansion in June, however, failed to raise the volume to the level of a year ago. Total contracts were 21.7 per cent smaller than in June last year. At the same time, the decrease in June was less than in previous months of the current year. This is indicated by the fact that contracts awarded in the first six months were 26.3 per cent smaller than a year ago. The decrease in June from the volume in the corresponding month last year was accounted for primarily by a curtailment of nonresidential contracts which showed a drop of 33.8 per cent. Residential contracts declined only 10.7 per cent.

It is doubtful whether the recent expansion of building activity will be greatly extended in view of the unfavorable nature of fundamental conditions. The rent index, which is based on 1926 as 100, declined in June for the eighth consecutive month dropping to 85.6 from 85.9 in May and from the peak of 88.1 last October. The decline in rents has only partially reflected the commodity price recession and a further drop in rents is consequently in prospect. Curtailment of building activity, rather than expansion, is the logical sequel to declining rents.

In addition to the unfavorable rent situation, high building costs continue to be a serious obstacle to building expansion. The moderate decline in building costs, which began last fall, came to a halt in June. While there was a further slight drop in building material prices, wage rates of common labor remained firm, while wage rates of skilled labor rose to the highest level on record. The total construction cost index in June was 103.8 as compared with the rent index of only 85.6.

Engineering Awards 30% Above Year Ago

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Aided by expansion in public construction, engineering building awards for the past week increased 30 per cent over the comparable 1937 period, the Engineering News-Record reported today. Awards totaled $57,454,000, against the preceding week and $44,041,000 in the like 1937 week.

The cumulative total for the year was $1,535,718,000, only 0.9 per cent under the $1,549,470,000 reported for the same period last year. Among the latest awards was a $1,000,000,000 contract for a plant at Savannah, Ga., by the National Gypsum Co.

THE PARKER CORP. GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., Aug. 9.—As we would expect with the drop in business activity since last fall, factory employment has declined. This compared with net income of $1,022,495, or 79 cents a common share for the first half of 1937. The indicated net loss for the June quarter was $629,507, compared with net loss of $237,928 in the March quarter and net income of $480,136, or 37 cents a common share in the June, 1937 quarter.

The total applied for was $303,121,000 and the total accepted, $100,025,000. The average price was 99.989, equivalent to a rate of 0.044 per cent.

Business Upturn Seen by Pelley

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, after returning from a transcontinental tour, said today: "The trend of business in the country is definitely upward. Psychology has improved enormously."

Heavier freight carloadings should follow in due course, he predicted.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 9.—Demand for gold stocks featured a quiet and steady market today. Transatlantics were about unchanged and British funds showed a slight improvement. Oils tended lower and copper gave a little ground. Industrials were neglected and domestic rails even.

Paris—Prices fluctuated irregularly in the bourse today. Rentes ended 10 centimes lower to 168 higher. Bank of France lost 120 francs while Suez Canal gained 345.

Liverpool—Wheat futures dropped 1d to 1¼d today in the wake of weak North American markets Monday, excellent European crop reports and slow demand for cash wheat. Possibility of mandatory loans on the American cotton crop around current levels offset the bearish government crop estimate yesterday and cotton futures ended 3d to 6d higher.

Criminal Tarheels Keep Courts Here Busy, Says Judge

Expressing the opinion that Washington "was doing all the criminal work for the State of North Carolina," Justice James M. Proctor in District Court yesterday sentenced Daniel C. Dixon, 24, colored, to from two to four years following a plea of guilty to housebreaking and larceny.

"If they would keep you down there we wouldn't have a bit of trouble here," Justice Proctor said.

In the next arraignment, Justice Proctor asked a colored defendant if he, too, came from North Carolina. The youth said no and smiled broadly.

Assistant United States Attorney A. B. Caldwell, who was handling the arraignments for the Government, stated afterward that a large percentage of the criminal court work in the Distrjct involved North Carolinians.

Says—

There's one thing that employers expect from people that work for 'em and that's cleanliness and neatness. I remember when my Aunt Pudy was workin' for the rich Jones family, doing the cookin'. Mrs. Jones walked into the kitchen one day and got boiling mad and you couldn't blame her.

She says, "My goodness, Pudy, all the pots and pans are dirty and this kitchen is a mess! It'll take you all night to clean this up. What have you been doing?" And Aunt Pudy says, "Nothin', Mrs. Jones; your daughter has been showin' me how they boil a potato at her cooking school."

CIO Abducted, Beat Workers, Senate Is Told

Prevented Back-to-Work Meeting at Canton in Steel Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators heard testimony yesterday that union members abducted and beat three leaders of a "back-to-work" meeting of Republic Steel employes in the "Little Steel" strike of last year.

J. G. Stewart, a steel worker who was active in a back-to-work movement at Canton, described to the Civil Liberties Committee the abduction of himself and two companions, one a deputy sheriff, and union witnesses corroborated part of his story.

Another union member testified that he helped to break up the proposed back-to-work rally and took guns away from several persons who had intended to participate.

Taken to Headquarters.

Stewart told the committee that on June 18, 1937, after he and a committee representing nonstrikers had sought unsuccessfully to obtain police protection to return to work, arrangements were made for a back-to-work meeting on Martindale road in Canton.

He went to the appointed spot, the witness said, with Philip Schauer and Raymond Stokoe. Stokoe, he said, was a special deputy.

Instead of finding nonstrikers at the meeting place, Stewart related, they met a group of C. I. O. pickets who "kidnaped" them and took them to union headquarters. Schauer and Stokoe, Stewart testified, were taken to a back room and beaten while he remained in the main union hall, after receiving a blow from a club.

Officer Still Captive.

Guy Sweany and Darrell Smith, union officials, said they were at Union headquarters while the three nonstrikers were there.

Smith said he saw a scene in the main hall similar to that described by Stewart, but did not go into the back room. He added, "I protected Mr. Stewart. He owes the fact he was not beaten up to me, and not to the police officer."

Sweany said none of the men was injured in his presence. He asserted that he protected Stokoe from a man with a club after Stokoe had attempted to strike him (Sweany).

Earlier the committee received testimony that Republic Steel Corporation compiled a blacklist of strikers. James Moseley, a former Pennsylvania Railroad detective, said Joseph F. Gilroy, captain of Republic police at Canton, identified pickets outside the plant by looking through a surveyor's transit.

Other testimony was that nervous Republic police wounded two plant officials in volleys of gunfire and that Republic police joined the supposedly Nonpartisan Law and Order League at Canton.

D. L. Hostetler, secretary of the Canton Chamber of Commerce, described a back-to-work vote held by mail after a previous attempt to hold such a vote had been balked when C. I. O. pickets surrounded the balloting place at the city auditorium.

Hostetler said 6,500 ballots were mailed out to persons on a pay roll list provided by Republic. About 3,600 persons replied that they wanted to return, while 216 voted to continue the strike, he said.

L. A. Carruthers Retired From Census Bureau

Employe 38 Years Plans to Continue Service as Civic Leader.

Lemuel A. Carruthers, Washington civic leader and employe of the Bureau of the Census for 38 years, was retired from the service yesterday and left the building, where well-wishers had flocked to say good-by, with a gold watch and a mahogany desk as leave-taking tokens.

Carruthers came to Washington 38 years ago from Tuscarawas County, Ohio, to become a clerk in the Census Bureau and while rising on merit to the position of assistant chief statistician of the division of financial statistics of States and cities, found time to become a leader of capital civic enterprises.

He is president of the Federation of Citizens Association, which has 65 member bodies, and a member of the American Statistical Association, the National Association of State Auditors and Treasurers, the National Municipal Association and the Finance Committee of the Washington Board of Trade. Recently he was appointed by Commissioner Hazen as a member of the advisory tax committee to District revenue problems.

For five years, Carruthers has been a District of Columbia delegate to the National Tax Conference. He is president of the Forest Hills Citizens Association and is affiliated with the Society of Oldest Inhabitants.

"My retirement from the Federal service will not bring a consequent withdrawal from civic affairs," he said yesterday at a farewell party given by fellow workers.

It was recalled that Carruthers has served under seven directors of the Census Bureau. He expressed belief that retirement should not be compulsory at the age of 70, but should be extended in instances where an employe's performance benefits the service.

House Group to Inspect Aliens' Incomes; Quiz Begins Friday

Roosevelt Grants Committee Power to Investigate Returns Where Suspect Is Believed to Have Received Money From Abroad.

President Roosevelt yesterday published an executive order granting the special committee of the House to investigate un-American activities powers to inspect income, excess profits and capital stock tax returns of individuals, corporations and private organizations. At the same time Chairman Martin Dies disclosed hearings will begin on Friday.

Under the President's order the committee has powers to investigate tax returns for 1932 and all subsequent years.

Dies said the tax returns would be inspected in cases where the committee had evidence the suspect had received money from abroad for propaganda purposes.

The committee, consisting of seven members, five Democrats and two Republicans, announced about 25 persons have already been subpenaed to testify at the hearings. The names of the witness were not disclosed, but Dies has revealed he subpenaed on August 3 George Sylvester Viereck.

Navy to List Aliens.

Coincident with these developments the Navy pressed a thorough check-up of aliens employed in its shipyards, now busy carrying out the Administration's huge naval program. Under the order commanding officers must forward to the Navy Department lists of all aliens on the shipyard pay rolls.

Chairman Dies in a radio broadcast last night said:

"The committee is determined at all times to be fair and impartial and to be concerned solely with one objective," Dies asserted, "the ascertainment of the truth. We will not permit the committee to become a three-ring circus. Neither will we permit any individual or organization to use the committee as a sounding board to obtain publicity or to injure others."

Labor, civic and patriotic organiztion representatives will testify in the course of the first week's hearings. Subpenaed witnesses will then be put on the stand. The committee's investigators are now in New York, Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, unearthing data for the hearings.

Denounces 'Smearing.'

Dies denied the committee will aim its investigation at American citizens of German descent. "Let me again reiterate that we have no more loyal, patriotic and vauable citizens than the people of German descent," he stated.

He denounced Congressional groups which have engaged in "smearing" someone or "putting someone on the pan." "Such committees," he emphasized, "are usually the tools of some organized group who are seeking to use the Government to obtain advantages over another group."

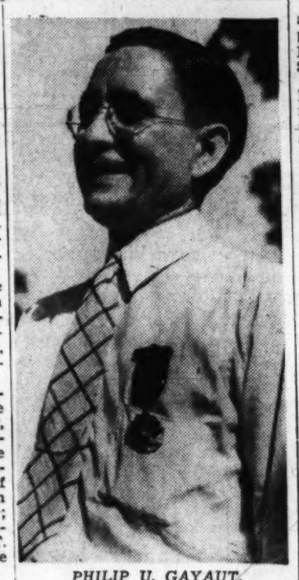
Crisfield, Md., Selected as '39 Convention City by Md., Del. Men.



PHILIP U. GAYAUT.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 9.—Elks of Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia today elected Philip U. Gayaut, of Washington, their new president and selected Crisfield, Md., as their 1939 convention city, and then prepared for the climax tomorrow of the eighteenth annual convention.

Gayaut, who is chairman of the board of trustees of the association and former exalted ruler of Washington, won out in a closely contested election with Frank Hladky, of Annapolis, the only other candidate. The vote was 51 to 43.

Other officers elected were Francis J. Petrott, Frederick, first vice president; John L. Durst, Frostburg, second vice president; Victor Topkiss, Wilmington, Del., third vice president; Calvert K. Hortle, Hagerstown, the retiring president of the association, secretary; John Mosner, Cumberland, treasurer; John E. Lynch, Washington, trustee for three years; Lewis T. Schroeder, Havre de Grace, trustee at large.

Washington delegates urged the selection of Crisfield for the convention next year. No other city was placed in nomination and the selection was made unanimous.

One resolution was offered at today's meeting, the Annapolis lodge proposing that the grand lodge be asked to prepare a special ritual for subordinate lodges to be used on the first Sunday in June of each year, when all Elks lodges conduct exercises for deceased members.

Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, attended the afternoon session and spoke briefly to the delegates.

Three thousand Elks and others gathered this afternoon at the fair grounds for a community picnic when ox roast, crabs and other food were served.

Tonight in the convention hall at the fair grounds, 20 pretty girls acting as models presented a style and fashion review which was followed by a cabaret show, at which 29 took part. Dancing followed. Elks from throughout the Cumberland Valley are expected to vie with delegates here for the convention in the closing day, which will be climaxed tomorrow night by a grand ball.

Two big events are scheduled for the evening, a soap box derby to be run off in the business section in which 34 boys will compete for the honor of representing the city in the national derby at Akron later in the month, and a number of other prizes.

A mile long parade following the derby will see 40 musical organizations and an equal number of uniformed bodies and floats in the line of march. One thousand dollars in prizes are being awarded.

The new officers will be installed tomorrow morning, to be followed by a memorial service for deceased members in charge of Mr. Gayout, after which Calvert K. Hartle, retiring president, will be presented the past president's badge. Announcement of the lodge winning the trustees' award for distinguished service and a ritualistic contest will bring the business session to a close.

Police Seek Boys Who Looted Safe

Washington police last night were asked to look for three boys, all believed to be under 21, wanted in Fairfax County, Va., for theft of $240 from a filling station safe.

Fairfax police said the boys were loitering at a Cities Service station near Camp Washington when the attendant left the office to service a customer. The boys then emptied the open safe of its contents, police said, and ed toward Washington in an automobile with District tags.
